WA's favourite comedian razzle dazzles

Peter Rowsthorn takes to the stage in Priscilla Queen of the Desert

by Josephine Allison

LIFE can take many unexpected turns, which happened to much-loved Australian comedian Peter Rowsthorn when he was confronted with the enormity of Covid-19 while flying from Melbourne to Perth last year.

"Lestimate that when C I lost $40,000 in a week," says Peter who is about to take to the stage at Crown as Bernadette in the adaption of the classic Australian film The Adventures of Priscilla Queen of the Desert directed by Trevor Patient with Cougar Morrison as Tick (Mitzi) and Nick Mayer as Adam (Fèlicia).

"I panicked a bit and got my truck driving licence in case I needed to go truck driving. I was pretty lucky, I was working for Channel 7 – and still am – in a show called Flashpoint on Monday nights. That kept on going and they did a news story on Flashpoint about me getting a truck driver's licence and that became a national news piece.

"From that, I got calls from inina companies ally worried about their employees' mental health so we devised an interview program. People were stuck in their dongas after 12-hour shifts and couldn't go to the gym or tavern. They were doing these shifts and coming home for 12 hours and not mixing with anyone.

"We devised an interview program with the likes of Glenn Robbins, Magda Szubanski and Dave Hughes, all my comedy friends;

Danny Green, sporting people, footy players I knew. Miners and their families would be sent a link so they could watch the same program together. It was also interactive so they could ask ques-

"I hosted it and because I knew the other people involved it was all rather light and funny. Then Kath & Kim was sold to Channel 9 so I got some money from that. Before I knew it was July and because we live in the greatest state on earth and I was starting to work again.

"I was very lucky I got through the worst of it."

Peter went on to appear in the Fringe Festival with daughter Frankie, 18.

"She started doing comedy

when she was 16 and said she wanted to try it," says Peter. "Instead of driving her to netball, I drive her to comedy festivals; she has done really well in a short space of time and is starting to get work around town.

"We did a show together which was lovely. She did her 10 to 15 minutes and I did the rest and voilà! we had a show which was sold out. Now it's a few corporate jobs until Priscilla which I'm really looking forward to a lot."

Priscilla tells the story of two Sydney drag artists, Tick and Adam and transgender woman Bernadette, who are contracted to perform a drag show at a resort in Alice Springs, at the behest of Tick's ex-wife Marion.

Due to Covid, the State Library of West-ern Australia is changing the way they run their Disrupted Festival this year. It will now be delivered through a series of monthly events. The theme is The times they are a changin'. The next event will be Going with the Flow to be held on 27 April and features Lucy Peach and the ABĆ's Andrea Gibbs. This event explores the power of female hormones, the issue of period poverty, and Lucy will possibly sing a song or two. Then on 25 May they hold a discussion about The Right to Die - A Conversation about voluntary assisted dying in Western Australia. This event takes a look at the recent changes to legislation, which is due to be implemented by

Ageing research snippet - Rethink your diet

LANDMARK research at the University of Sydney by Dr Samantha Solon-Biet from the Charles Perkins Centre suggests there could be a cost to staying lean your whole life and that a diet low in protein and high in healthy carbohydrates may be best for healthy ageing.

"How we age is highly influenced by diet, and it's not just the number of calories that we eat but the types of food that we get them from," said Dr Solon-Biet.

While long term high protein intake promotes lean mass and can help with weight loss, it has been found to turn on pro-growth and pro-ageing pathways that lead to accelerated

"A lot of popular diets promote high protein, but we have found that a diet low in protein and high in carbohydrates turns on systems that promote longevity," explained Dr Solon-Biet.

Don't take this as an excuse to gorge on cakes and processed foods though, the carbohydrates in this diet should come from healthy sources such as vegetables, fruit and wholegrains to reap these benefits.

Word of the month

Nostrum Pronounced Nasstrum Noun Definition

A usually questionable remedy scheme.

The word nostrum is linked to false hopes or miracle cures.

It has been part of the English language since the early 17th century and comes from the Latin noster meaning 'our' or 'ours'.

It is thought that specially prepared medicinal concoctions came to be called nostrums because their makers marketed them as their 'own' remedy, emphasising that such a potion was unique or exclusive to the person peddling it.

From international fashion designer to mental health campaigner

Aurelio Costarella

by Allen Newton

AURELIO Costarella is a WA style icon, with a 34-year career, earning him international acclaim.

He's designed gowns for local and international celebrities including Rihanna, Dita Von Teese, Tyra Banks, Nicole Scherzinger, Melissa George, Geri Halliwell, Tina Arena, Dannii Minogue, Jennifer Hawkins, Emma Booth and Naya Rivera.

He's also been in the depths of despair, battling prescribed drug dependency for depression and anxiety which forced him to walk away from the fashion industry.

Aurelio spent 51 weeks in Perth Clinic, was prescribed 23 different medications and has spent three years trying to shake off dependency on them, but now he's found purpose in helping others overcome prescribed drug dependency and depression.

Medication is a trap too many fall into, he says, and it's not an issue restricted to younger people.

Aurelio has joined the Mental Health Association of WA to lobby for more investment to provide preventative and community support for mental health patients.

He has been an ambassador for Lifeline for the past six years and has also joined the board of Disability and Diversity in the Arts (DADAA) which provide services to people with mental health issues, mostly around creative services and the performing arts.

In a bid to raise awareness around informed consent and patient safety in the mental health/prescribing space, Aurelio is establishing an incorporated association to counter the harm that he and thousands of other have experienced in the system.

"As people get older, they can experience higher levels of psychological distress," Aurelio says.

says.
"A great number of things contribute to mental health issues of people who may not have had a lived experience earlier in life.

"Midlife is often associated with unhappy events: the empty nest syndrome, menopause, infidelity, financial concerns, a growing sense of mortality, and general unhappiness with the daily grind."

Key contributors to emotional distress later in life can include the death of a partner or child; end of a marriage or relationship; financial issues – loss of a job, drop in income due to retirement; loss of self-esteem, often based on the loss of work, a business or the inability to find meaningful work; chronic illness; or an inability to live independently.

"These factors may lead to social isolation and/or loneliness, loss of independence and increased psychological distress."

Aurelio says it's also important to note the prevalence of high and very high levels of psychological distress in women aged 45 – 54.

Suicide rates are highest amongst men in the 45 to 49 age group and for women in the 50 to 54 age group. Suicide rates for both men and women peak again at age 80 to Aurelio says self-nurturing and having tools in place to get through those difficult periods is very important.

"Mindfulness is a useful tool, although it is much maligned now because it comes from that Buddhist tradition of mediating

"A lot of people aren't able to quieten their mind and struggle to meditate, but it is actually a powerful tool for anyone dealing with any form of mental health issue."

He says it is important that young people are introduced to these tools because otherwise later in life, when they might be in their fifties they don't know how to deal with these situations.

"In my family, nothing was ever talked about, everything was brushed under the carpet.

"And that goes to the issue of people getting older – and that was something I saw a lot of at the Perth Clinic, people who I met in their 70s or 80s – and were dealing with the reality of getting to that – which in itself is something they really struggle with, which is completely understandable.

"But how do we deal with it?

"A lot of people don't know how to ask for help. If you've never been good at it, you get to a certain point in your life where you just don't ask for help because it's not something you've been conditioned to do.

"I know that's been true for me because I'm the world's worst person when it comes to asking for support from people around me.

"I know that they are there and that if I reach out people will step up and want to be there for me, but I'm still not good at it."

Aurelio says human connection is really important. This is where community support centres are great.

"You have people who are community oriented, who need their connections, whether that's going to quiz nights or to the bingo, it's all about connection.

"I saw that with my mum after my dad passed away. She was still living in the family home on her own and she was struggling.

"Between my brother and sister and I, we were there every day supporting her, but it was very clear to us that she needed to move into care. But it was not something she was open to until she actually raised it and said: "look, you're all working so hard to keep me here, and I think it's time now."

"I'd go to visit her every day, go in the morning before work and get her breakfast and then straight after work and get her dinner on and we'd be sitting there in the same chair every day – and she'd be just looking completely miserable.

"As hard as it was getting her into care, once she was there she flourished. She became a completely different person connecting with other residents or the staff.

"Reach out to Lifeline if you are feeling they need crisis support, but there is also a real need for peer support groups with people who have lived experience, whether that's through mental health issues or issues around suicidal ideation – people who have experienced grief.

"There's nothing more powerful than speaking to people who have been where you are now and I'm sure there are support groups out there – and if there aren't there should be, because you're not getting that level of support in aged care

"That was an interesting piece for me with my parents. Social works, counsellors, there was nothing, certainly nothing visible and they were never offered any services and surely that's a really important part of that process.

"So if it's not happening in aged care, where are these facilities to provide wrap around services?

"If you are living at home and you are in the community there are community-based programs that you can reach out to. Or just meet with people once a week for morning tea or a lamington and a cup of coffee.

"It is important just to have that connection with other people who have gone through or are going through similar experiences," he says.

Dear Editor.

CLOTHES FOR EMPERORS

> DAVE, CHECK THIS OUT! I'VE FOUND

SOME RESEARCH

THAT THE ENTIRE SCIENTIFIC COMMUNITY SEEM TO HAVE MISSED.

THE well-researched article of January 2021 by Lee Tate called for older generations to be well cared for.

Following the Royal Commission into Aged Care, which heard sad tales of neglect, malnutrition, chemical and physical restrictive practices, let us make 'Ageing with Dignity and in Community our number one priority.

New federal funding, reporting standards and staffing ratios will only mask an issue which state and local governments must also help address, namely funding for primary health networks and GP's for early detection of dementia.

The entire retirement living, residential care and nursing home industry must adopt a 'value care' mindset as more care is delivered in the community.

One of the important values is for Australians living with dementia to remain connected to their community. The new planning guidelines of the WA Government calls for aged care accommodation to be integrated within local communities, serviced by adequate transport networks and located close to health and community services.

To this should be added memory cafés or dementia friendly communities as the number of older Australians doubles over the next 40 years and more than 6.4 million Australians are predicted to be diagnosed with dementia.

Assistive technology in the home, digital health and wearables can support safer and more independent living by detecting frailty, predicting falls and monitoring nutrition, movement and exercise. These will provide quality of life enabling older Australians to age well and live close to where their children work and their grand children attend school, university and play sports.

Dear Editor,

I'D like to comment on the protesting nannas in the February edition of Have a Go News.

What an inspiration in this age of so-called climate awareness, whatever your views, whether denier, believer or fence-sitter, what is the point in destroying a large number of forests? Total waste and obviously down to money.

Do we really want to end up like the Amazon, which at some stage had a 17 per cent annual deforestation rate?

We are prepared to bang on about climate change, which has been happening for millennia, but still drive gas guzzling cars, use air-con on the mildest of days, light up rooms that don't need lighting and chop down trees at an earth-shattering rate.

We mention the climate change effect on bushfires, but conveniently forget the many smoking motorists. who carelessly discard their butts in the road.

David Attenborough's documentaries tell us that humans have had a huge influence on global warming since the 1970s, so one assumes that before this what we did was minimal.

Poor old carbon dioxide, just like cholesterol is getting a really bad press at the moment, but any press that is prepared to highlight the nanna's cause is OK with me.

Yours sincerely,

David Rudman Port Kennedy

Dear Editor,

CONGRATULATIONS to the Lunns on celebrating their 65 years of marriage and to Joe for not losing his Yorkshire accent.

As a one-year-old, 70 years ago, we went to Yorkshire to show me off to my mother's family, she being a war bride. Dad was convinced to open up a butcher's shop in the Yorkshire seaside town of Scarborough where we stayed for six years.

There I learned to speak Yorkshire and on our return to Australia I was forced to take elocution lessons at school as no one understood what I was saying like "put bung in ole lad" which is Yorkshire for, "close the door".

So keep going Joe - "ee by gum its luvely"!

Dear Editor,

THE article on page 6 of the March Have a Go News quotes Bruce Pascoe's book Dark Emu as factual. Many commentators claim it is a work of fiction.

In particular, a very well researched book Bitter Harvest by Peter O'Brien who has thoroughly read the journals of explorers such as Charles Sturt, Thomas Mitchell found that Bruce Pascoe's claims are false. His claim of Aboriginality is also refuted by many in the Aboriginal community.

As a matter of balance, I believe Lee Tate should do some research by reading Bitter Harvest.

Sigrid Thornton

by Lee Tate

SIGRID Thornton says she is very happy walking Bodhi, her labradoodle, every day.

"She is our cherished family member," Sigrid insists over the phone from Sydney where she's working.

But the multi-gonged actor is again away the Melbourne from home she shares with producer husband Tom Burstall, And Bodhi.

During the pandemic, Sigrid, 62, has emerged triumphant, starring in Channel 9's showpiece drama, Amazing Grace, as well as being signed for a string of new ventures.

When biz people were battling to find work, Sigrid, star of screen and stage for four decades, travelled from her Melbourne home to Sydney, went into quarantine and starred on set for the eight episode, onehour series.

Amazing Grace, says the Nine blurb, is: "about life's most surprising and precious moments - midwifery and mayhem."

While the pandemic put restrictions on the TV production, including access to birthing centres, a veteran consultant midwife was on set daily to give the actors ing's finer points.

Sigrid told me: "I'm terrifically fortunate to be working in a field I find so exhilarating. It's not easy to have lon-gevity in this business. But this is what I have always done."

"I'm never doing nothing. I'm somebody who enjoys going for long walks; very simple things. Going out with Bodhi focuses the walk.

"When I'm not working on a project, I'm usually working on a program of my own. And I've been in a relationship with Tom for a very long time. It is my rock.

'Our two kids have left home. That's the way of the world. They're doing well and I'm very proud of them.

"We have our heads above water during this, well siege, I suppose you could call it," she said.

Sigrid said the TV series ran smoothly and spotlights crucial birthing issues.

'There's been growing push towards encouraging and emexpectant powering mothers to participate in all important decisions around the birth of their babies.'

Sigrid said times were changing from the era when birthing was maledominated.

The preciousness of life and uniqueness of every birth is being acknowledged.

"The birthing of every child is very unpredictable and unique. No expert knows how it is going to go. Every woman, every baby and she said.

Sigrid, the actor's actor, explains that domestic drama on television is as important now as ever before.

"We have to be vigilant in telling our own stories that are very different from American or English or Scandinavian stories. They have their place but our local stories are great and need to be told.

"They are critical for the enhancement and development of our own culture and society."

Sigrid said that with so many media outlets, there was room for enormous diversity of storytelling - a resurgence in a kind of golden age for television.

"I'm a story-teller so obviously I think it's important."

Sigrid said WA's sense of isolation had created a unique environment for story-telling that needs to be valued. Indigenous influence was also slowly being recognised.

"Aboriginal history just wasn't in the school syllabus. That's changing, which is a very good thing but it has a fair way to go. The change is very encouraging.

"Indigenous is critical to who we are as a country. We are just starting, as story-tellers, to acknowledge, thank God - the increasing access to Aboriginal sto-

The aspiring actor worked in Sydney and then Melbourne, following her husband-to-be as well as the community's big attraction, Aussie Rules.

L-R; Vivienne 'Binyarn' Hansen making her remedies - Husband Mort doing a smoking ceremony in the bush - Viv out bush

by Lee Tate

BUSH medicine business is booming for Vivienne 'Binyarn' Hansen, but profit isn't in the equation.

"It's not about making money. It's about helping people, making them well or making them feel better," said the Balladong Wadjuk Yorga woman from the Bibbulmun Nation, or Noongar people.

confirms Vivienne that prominent people including child health expert Fiona Stanley and footballers Gary Ablett, Liam Ryan, Josh Kennedy and Nic Naitanui have had success with Vivienne's bush medicine.

"Some has been passed to people from my rellies. I have a granddaughter, Imahra Cameron, playing AFLW for the Eagles, a neph-ew who played AFL for Gold Coast and some playing for the Dockers," Vivienne said from her Kelmscott home.

"Fiona Stanley ended up getting a tub for a granddaughter whose apparently eczema cleared up beautifully, said Vivienne, an authority on bush medicine.

James Blundell is also a fan. Vivienne said she met the singer at a country and western event at Boyup Brook.

"We were chatting away and he mentioned problems with his fingers due to arthritis so I gave him some rub as a gift. Next time we met he said it was really good," she said.

The 71-year-old said ointments and body rubs worked well for 'teenagers my age' with aches and pains.

"I looked after my mother-in-law for quite a few years suffering from cancer, helping her with bush medicine, helping alleviate pain and making her feel better," she said.

The cheerful motherof-six first produced an ointment about 13 years ago, followed by a cream body lotion and business took off with Vivienne and husband Mort - 'my partner in crime' - operating out of their home.

"I kicked my old man (Mort) out of his work shed but we ended up using a room inside the house. If people ring up and ask for something, I just whip it up and have it ready to collect," she said.

Vivienne received an email from France requesting a tub of herbal medicine for a customer who says he's just run out. A Queenslander is another regular and a UWA staffer sends bush medicine to London.

Every few weeks, the couple sets off in their ute with "just a pair of cutters to cut enough leaves for what we need now."

Vivienne bush medicine tradition dating back for generations.

"Out in the bush we will grab a shopping bag full of leaves and bring them home. I put in bees wax and olive oil, heat the leaves, strain them, let them cool until they solidify and I've got an ointment or a muscle balm.

"If I want a cream form, emulsifying wax binds the soil and water together."

For arthritis, eucalyptus leaves and emu oil - when available is used, blended with Vivienne's secret ingredient.

She talks of using olive oil, straining, steaming fresh herbs, adding bees wax, melting and pouring into containers.

Native species like sandalwood, soap bush, eucalyptus and wattle are among her key ingredients.

Vivienne, raised by her grandparents near Brookton, grew up learning about traditional medicine. She then trained at Marr Mooditj Foundation, completing Certificate IV in Bush and Western Herbal Medicine.

She was also the first Indigenous member of the National Herbalist Association and was a delegate to the 7th International Conference on Herbal Medicine in 2010.

At school in Brookton, Vivienne became a prefect.

among Aboriginal stu-dents. We were all related, cousins," she laughed.

"But we all got on well at school, non-Indigenous and Aboriginal kids were all friends. If we had a bust-up, we just sided with whoever were the friends we were with."

Getting to third year at high school, she was the first Aboriginal girl to go past age 14 at school. She was first Aboriginal captain of both the hockey and softball teams.

"After that, a lot of Aboriginal kids went on further in school and became sports captains," she adds.

Vivienne's connection with country and Indigenous tradition is palpable.

"We like going out in the forest with family and make a fire, billy the tea and sit around having a yarn. The family all like doing that.

"We might go out the Brookton Highway, anywhere out in the forest, maybe just a day drive to get out in the bush. The kids like to swim at the dam and we have a look at the water levels," says Vivienne.

Mort and Vivienne are among a committed group called Activate the Wheatbelt.

"All these young people plant 20,000 to 30.000 trees over one weekend - acacia and eucalyptus and other native trees. It's absolutely amazing, they are all volunteers out to rehabilitate the land," Vivienne said.

Sunflower Sisters: a gripping saga of three different women

Martha Hall Kelly © Jeffrey Mosier Photography Inset; Sunflower Sisters is available from bookshops

by Josephine Allison

TOPSELLING American author Martha Hall Kelly has just launched her new book Sunflower Sisters, hailed by New York Times bestselling author Lisa Wingate as: "weaving an exquisite tapestry of women determined to defy the moulds the world has made for them."

In early 1861 Georgeanna Woolsey knows she's not cut out for the demure life, and finds her passion for nursing just as the US Civil War breaks out. In the South, Jemma is enslaved on the Peeler Plantation while her beloved sister Patience, is enslaved on the property next door. Following a tragedy that shakes Jemma to the core, she is sold by the cruel Anne-May just as the Union Army comes through.

Disgruntled and unhappy in her marriage, Anne-May is forced to run the Peeler Plantation when her husband joins the Union Army and her brother enlists with the Confederates. Now in charge, she follows her own ambitions and desires Sunflowers were used as a sign of danger on the American underground railroad and placed on fences and various plac-

Martha Hall Kelly answered some questions.

Have a Go News: Sunflower Sisters is a sweeping historical story of three very different women set during the American Civil War. How relevant is their story today, especially with events in the US in recent years?

Martha: I had no idea

Sunflower Sisters would be so relevant today. With the rise of White Nationalism, it's more important than ever to revisit why we fought the American Civil War, to end slavery. There has been a resurgence of interest about our bloodiest war, since we seem to be replaying the same issues that we had in 1861.

Have a Go News: When did you start your research, how extensive was it and where did it take you?

Martha: I started researching Caroline Ferriday and her family back in 2000, which led to my first novel Lilac Girls. The research for this book, about her Woolsey an-cestors during the Civil War took about four years to research. I read one hundred of the family's letters, which took quite a while. I also visited former plantations, now museums, researched at Gettysburg where the battle took place and places like the former slave market in Charleston, South Carolina.

Have a Go News:

Georgeanna, Jemma and Anne-May are very different women. What qualities do you consider they have in common?

Martha: All three are determined to get what they think will make them happy. Georgy wants to be a nurse, which at times is a bit of a disaster. Anne-May, the plantation mistress, has her cap set on a wealthy local merchant who is not her husband and Jemma wants to reunite her enslaved family. They are also all very capable women - not victims - and go about enacting change. They also have all these issues with men, which I think keeps it interesting.

Have a Go News: What can we learn from their lives today?

Martha: I think we can learn that though our lives are difficult we can always do something about our problems, and to not take adversity lying down. And that matter not how bad something is, you've done you can always be redeemed if you admit your failings.

Have a Go News:

How long did it take to write Sunflower Sisters? America has a colourful history.

Martha: Very colourful. It took me four years or so. I didn't know much about the Civil War, so I had to start at square one. I read a lot of books written in the 1860s, including an illustrated Civil War sex manual, which was truly bizarre.

Have a Go News: Tell us a little about what you were doing when the book was launched in late March. What was your schedule?

Martha: Sadly, we could not do an in person book tour but Random House set up the next best thing, a virtual tour. People can find it on my web site: marthahallkelly. com. The nice thing is, until I can safely come to Australia, we can all be together online despite the distance.

Have a Go News: Are you planning another book? How do you relax when not writing?

Martha: Yes, I have two more books in the works with Random House, a Cold War novel and a contemporary thriller. Both have been so much fun to write. I don't relax as much as I probably should, but I like to walk my dog Ollie and ride my bike and read (right now thrillers) and get lost in a great cable series like Ozark. My husband and I are still reeling after bingeing that one.

Sunflower Sisters (Bantam Australia), $29.99.is available from good bookshops.

Ed's note: I have read both Lilac Girls and Lost Roses, two exceptionally good reads particularly if you like historical fiction as I do.

Where Opinions Matter - the bug bear of the dreaded parking meter

A modern parking meter

by Lee Tate

WHAT is to be done about the greatest of humankind's bugbears, that steely sentinel, the parking meter?

Parking meters are a deterrent to shopping and dining and hurdles to studying and attending hospitals.

Retailers and councils spend big on promoting their shops, their wares and their attractions but much of their investment is wasted because of parking problems, or the perception of them.

So much for shopping being a pleasant experi-

Given the enormous switch in shopping habits to online ordering, parking issues are a bigger threat to the retail bottom

There's no end to tales of woe with parking.

A newspaper photographer parked in Fremantle and wandered to the nearest meter, which was some way up the road. By the time he got back to his car with paid ticket set for his dashboard, the inspector had pounced.

The photographer then was required to take the ticket to council chambers and make a claim for a refund, which he did. Welcome to the shops.

I once parked for just 20 minutes on a threehour meter and copped a ticket. The recovery process was so demanding I grudgingly forfeited the Nurses arriving at hospitals for work have to battle with policed, paid parking. As do arriving patients and carers. Don't even mention airport park-

Curtin University is among those learning places patrolled by parking police in golf carts. First-time visitors and students would do well to consult passing regulars to learn how to master the modern meters.

Students have to factor into the cost of their education, substantial daily parking fees and the odd fine (as when their parking receipt has fallen from the dashboard and can't be seen by the inspector).

There are big profits for the private companies with rights to police parking. A Melbourne council spent $817,000 on a fiveyear parking system contract.

Council have myriad ways of tackling parking.

Cottesloe parking bays may be the way to go on policing. Some bays are imbedded with hidden glass tubes and others have a sensor beam that detects when cars arrive and leave. Parking inspectors are on-the-ball for expiring cars but parking is free and there are no ugly grey meters.

Over generations, billions of dollars have been spent worldwide to install, service and monitor people's parking since the world's first working parking meter, the Black Maria, appeared in the US in 1935.

Australia's parking meters have spread like a virus since the 1950s.

There was one bright spot when the Surfers Paradise metermaids appeared, bikini-clad, in 1964 to help announce paid parking.

The gold-bikini girls pumped money into expired meters to help drivers ease into what was ahead.

Don't you hate the meters around shops and cafes that require drivers to guestimate how long they will be parked before they pump-in their coins, notes or credit cards?

What a bugbear! While enjoying yourself shopping, eating or socialising, you have to be mindful of the time and dash back to beat the clock. This is to the detriment of shops and cafés because you may well have extended your time shopping, eating and spendt more money.

Some popular parking stations have limited meters so customers are forced to queue (rain or no) to pay-up. Bad luck if you are elderly, a foreigner or disabled, struggling with sometimes confusing and hard-to-read instruc-

All-in-all, parking meters are a total turn-off, adding to life's stresses.

Of course, parking has to be policed to prevent parking hogs, penalties have to be imposed and money has to be collected. But there has to be a better, friendlier way.

Shuttle buses have found only limited favour with shoppers but could be further developed.

Driverless cars could drop us at destinations, park way outside shopping areas and can collect us when WE are ready.

Lateral thinkers, please! What do you think? Email info@haveagone ws.com.au with Opinion in the subject line.

Retirement looks different with a Reverse Mortgage

An avid traveller and adventurer, Cheryl Collins (72) is not one to sit back in retirement. Working as a nurse for 47 years, Cheryl had built significant equity in her home. Wanting to make the most of her well-deserved retirement and do what she loves most – travel, Cheryl looked at options to access these funds. Realising that a P&N Bank Reverse Mortgage was a way to unlock the equity in her home, Cheryl's retirement took her on a string of new adventures.

A Western Australian icon still firing on all cylinders at 103-years-old

by Allen Newton

"THERE'S not many my age around," laughs 103-year-old war veteran Arthur Leggett when I pick up the phone to chat to him about his remarkable life.

Few of us make the milestone centenary, let alone with the energy to shame a person a quarter his age, but Arthur is still very much firing on all cylinders.

He'll be up before dawn to commemorate ANZAC Day at a dawn service at the retirement home where he lives.

"It's a very sincere little ceremony and I usually recite The Ode and all the lads do their bit and we have quite an impressive little ceremony on ANZAC Day dawn," he says.

He believes ANZAC Day continues to be important.

'To the best of my historical knowledge that was when we first went into action in a big way in a determined assault.

"It was a most horrendous event with a great unnecessary loss of life, so it means a lot to me and I think it should mean a lot to the nation."

Arthur spent four years in a prisoner of war camp in Germany.

Arthur's own father served in World War I in the trenches of France and Arthur holds on to a couple of his medals.

Arthur also gives the ANZAC Day address at Mt Lawley Senior High School, which has named its school library after the

"The angle that I use is not about glory or old mates, I just point out to the school children the terrific advantages they have living in this country and I also point out to them that they have these advantages because of the sacrifices that men have made in past wars to keep this country the way it is."

In an interview with the Australians at War Film Archive in 2004 Arthur told the interviewer he didn't think young people understood what they were fighting for, but they were appreciative that they did.

"That's why you get so many kids at ANZAC Day," he says.

You can't tell me that those kids know about the horrors of war, and all that. But they know it happened, and they are celebrating the occasion in their own little way. And if they have these thoughts in their mind, as they grow up, they become citizens that appreciate these things.'

Arthur will be adding to his ANZAC itinerary by popping along to provide some inspiration at the Perth Town Hall's Tuesday Morning Show, a free weekly community event aimed at seniors, with a program of musical entertainment and speakers on 27 April from 11am.

Arthur says he'll be up on-stage answering questions as best he is

"I'll give what answers I can without telling any lies or extending the truth too far," he chuckles.

The energetic centenarian also writes bush poetry and wrote an autobiography, Don't Cry For Me when he was 80.

He's been heavily involved in the RSL and was president of the Ex-Prisoners of War Association for 25 years receiving an OAM for service to veterans and their families.

He has been associated with the Over 45 Social Canoe Club, participating in Avon Descents.

Arthur was a signaller in the 2/11th Battalion. He fought against the Italian army in Libya and in the battles of Bardia and Tobruk, before being captured by German paratroopers during the battle of Crete in Greece in 1941 when he was 22.

During four years of incarceration, he was forced to work in the coal mines in northern Poland before being forced on a death march in the winter of 1944/45 across the Czechoslovakian Alps to Bavaria.

After the war he worked as a purchasing and expediting officer until his

MAYBE war is God's way of teaching us geography. You can no more win a war than you can win an earthquake. In a nuclear war, all men are cremated equal.

George Orwell said the quickest way to end a war was to lose it.

As two old diggers made their way to the AN-ZAC parade one says to the other: "was it you or your brother that got killed in New Guinea?"

Old Fred wanted to join the local Returned Servicemen's League and they asked him if he had a war record.

"Bloody oath," he replied; "I got Vera Lynn singing White Cliffs of Dover."

ANZAC Day approaches and after last year's cancellation disappointments, I'm still confused as to what will happen this year. I know our Blues Concert at Cannington is definitely not on, and I have read the dawn service at Kings Park is lim-

Of course, the legendary day will survive and maintain its position as the most important day on the calendar of two nations. Each year school teachers across the land task their students to express their views of this sacred part of history. Here is part of a poem written by a 14-yearold Joshua Dyer that was sent to me recently.
One thousand men are walking

Walking side by side Singing songs fron home

The spirit as their guide These men live on forever In the hearts of those they saved

A nation truly grateful For the path of peace they paved They march as friends and comrades

But they do not march for war

Step closer to salvation A tranquil steady corps They dream of those they left behind

And know they dream of them

Forever in those poppy

There walks one thousand men.

I don't have a war record, but I did serve with the entertainment force in East Timor in 2008. Retired Major Peter Heeney organised so that he, Kevin Bloody Wilson, his daughter and I joined some musicians from the east coast to provide some light relief for the 1500 plus troops from Australia and NZ stationed in the still unstable new democracy. Entertain we did, and with flights in black hawk copters, bus rides through some very mountainous country, excitement, humour, these unique experiences exploded the memory bank.

K B Wilson and I formed a somewhat irreverent relationship with a colonel and over a cup of tea he told us a story of a young UN recruit who had left East Timor recently.

Food was scarce, meat unobtainable. The young female UN recruit on a minimum six-month stay, perused the display of home-made jams, potions, and scrawny vegetables in a shop, but her eyes were drawn to the two beautiful puppies caged in the corner. A companion she concluded, and after several minutes of deciding which puppy and price negotiations she finally pointed to her choice.

Kevin Bloody Wilson (second from right) was apart of the 'entertainment force' with Rick Steele in East Timor 2008

Within seconds out came a large meat cleaver, the puppy was decapitated and butchering began. According to the colonel she was so upset she decided to quit and returned to whence she came.

War is cruel; even in peacetime. As we all prepare ourselves to celebrate and remember with pride our returned service men and women, don't forget how lucky we are to live in peace in this wonderful country. Lest We Forget.

Half a dozen blokes were working on a high rise. Lunchtime they would sit on the beam twenty storeys up and discuss things like wives, girlfriends and the contents of their lunch box. Fred says to his cobber: "mate if I get these soggy tomato sandwiches again tomorrow, I'm gunna jump."

Unfortunately, the next day Fred's premonition comes true and he jumps.

A week later and George is suffering with a similar problem. "I just can't take it anymore. Every day, soggy lettuce and bloody Vegemite. Tell my wife the bloody stale sandwiches made me do it."

Unbelievably, a couple of weeks later Berty began complaining in a similar

"I am so over this. It is just not fair. Surely people can do better than this. The same crap every day. No more, no more.

"With a cry of 'Geronimo' he leapt to certain fate.

The next day the remaining fellas were talking.
Bill says, "you know guys, I can kinda understand Fred and George's take on things, but Berty makes his own lunch.'

Cheers dears.

How living in a granny flat, caravan, mobile home or boat can impact your pension

by Hank Jongen, General manager – Services Australia

I'M OFTEN asked about how different living arrangements can impact your pension. Let's look at some of these.

Granny flat interestsIf someone buys a bigger house for their children with the intention of living with them, builds a self-contained unit on their children's land, or gives their children a lump sum and lives in one of their bedrooms, we call this a 'granny flat interest'.

Granny flat interests are created when you exchange assets, money (or both) to live in someone's property for the rest of your life.

How you create the interest will also determine if we consider you a homeowner for the purposes of your payment, and if we include the value of that interest in your assets test. This may affect both your eligibility for the pension and how much pension you can get.

Granny flat interests can also have significant implications for your possible aged care needs and your estate.

I recommend you seek financial and legal advice before you create a granny flat interest. Living in a caravan.

mobile home or on a boat

If the home you own is a boat, a caravan, a relocatable or nonrelocatable home in a caravan park or lifestyle village and you pay site or mooring fees, you're assessed differently to a person who owns the home and land. That's because you own your home, but not the land it's on or the boat mooring. In these cases, your boat, caravan, relocatable or non-relocatable home will be exempt from the assets test and won't affect your pension. You may also be eligible for rent assistance for your site or mooring fees.

If you own the land (up to 2 hectares) or mooring as well, it may also be exempt from the assets test and won't affect your pension. However, in this situation you won't be eligible for rent assistance.

We assess retirement villages differently, so it's important we know whether you live in a retirement village or in a caravan park or lifestyle village. The best thing for you to do is get in touch with us through your normal payment line so we can help you.

Our free and confidential Financial Information Service can provide information on granny flat and other living arrangements. Just call 132 300 and say 'Financial Information Service' when prompted.
Until next time.

If you have a question of a general nature for Services Australia general manager Hank Jongen, simply email info@haveagonews.com.au with Hank in the subject line.

Royal Life Saving WA at retirees meeting

THE guest speaker at the next meeting of the Association of Independent Retirees (AIR) Perth Northern Suburbs branch on 15 April will be Meg Abercrombie from Royal Life Saving WA.

Her talk will include aspects of their work specifically tailored towards seniors.

The following meeting will be held at 9.30am on 20 May and the speaker will be Emily Nixon from Bespoke Wills and Estate Lawyers. She will be talking about essential information that we should know and do as we get older.

AIR represents the interests of both fully and partly self-funded retirees to government at all levels. It is completely apolitical, solely seeking to improve and maintain the positions of Australian retirees. Membership consists of people who derive at least a portion of their income from independent means, however, at least half of the members rely on the age pension for a substantial part of their income.

Under the current WA Covid-19 rules they are restricted to numbers in the meeting room. Therefore, if you wish to attend as a guest please reserve a seat by registering your interest.

All meetings are held at the Penistone Park Community Sporting Facility, 27, Penistone Street, Greenwood.

All AIR members and any interested guests are most welcome.

Cost $4 per person including raffle tea or coffee.

Return your empty drink bottles for cash or charities

by Karen Majer

IN March and April last vear I answered some of your questions about recycling and highlighted the good news that WA was to implement a Container Deposit Scheme.

Now it's well and truly up and running. Jackie Dickson, who with husband Marc operate the MR Refund facility in the Margaret River Region, says it's gaining momentum.

"Each day we're seeing more and more locals coming in with their containers and embracing a new way of recycling. Putting a value on these items has had a huge impact on how they are treated by our community. When you recycle with Containers for Change, you get a 10 cent refund for every eligible drink container you return. What would have previously been tossed in a bin is now your grandchild's pocket money, your morn-ing coffee or your extra savings for something special.

"Such a simple task of separating drink containers from your other recycling means you have extra space in your fortnightly recycling bin and you benefit from the value of the product," she said.

To help us to remember which containers are eligible, the Containers for Change website offers a little rhyme: "Aluminium is a win. Glass and plastic are always in. Steel and paper are good to go. But milk and wine bottles are a no."

"Once the containers leave our site they are baled and sent to scheme-approved recyclers for reprocessing," Jackie said. "What's really exciting about this scheme is that we're seeing the glass bottles recycled back into glass bottles, which doesn't happen with the glass from your yellow bins at this stage.

Jackie has a special request on behalf of the recycling staff. "Please remove lids from bottles. It boggles my mind after being a waste educator for 10 years that people still leave lids on their plastic and glass bottles. They are made of different material than the bottle they are on and can injure workers at the recycling facilities when the bales are compressed."

You can take the 10 cents per item refund in cash or donate it to a cause of your choice. Containers for Your Change depot may have charities or community groups already registered that you can choose from. You might also suggest that your favourite local group registers.

If you run or represent a community group or charity, the scheme is an easy way of raising funds. You can simply sign up your group and share your unique scheme ID with everyone in your network so that they can nominate your group when they return their bottles. You might even organise a convenient collection point at your meeting place and take the bottles to your depot in bulk. The donated refunds are deposited directly into your group's bank account.

"We've seen so many containers donated to local clubs, groups and charities in our region and it's a reminder that even if you don't see a value in returning your containers for a few dollars, they all add up for volunteer-based groups who can really benefit from your donations," Jackie told me.

"River Angels has re-ceived over $1500 since the scheme started and Conservation Nature Margaret River Region has $670 just from donations to their scheme id number."

What can you do with ineligible containers? They should still go into your recycling bin but the Containers for Change Website has some creative suggestions to upcycle bottles. A great project for the grandchildren.

As it happened - beyond the stories - social champion Edith Cowan

by Lee Tate

ONE hundred years ago, Australia felt a political shock that led to significant social changes.

The sole cause was WA's Edith Cowan who, in becoming the first woman to serve as a member of any parliament in Australia and most of the world, set about forcing doors to open in health, social welfare and politics.

Most Australians

even West Australians - are ignorant of what a ground-breaking social champion Cowan was.

Despite her name and image liberally spread around Australia, few people are aware of the drama. breakthroughs and achievements in her life story.

Edith Dircksey Cowan's image features on our $50 note and, previously, on stamps. There's a memorial clock for her in King's Park and she's named on plaques in Perth's St George's Cathedral and in the city. A university and federal electorate are named af-

She began making news from 1921 when legislation in Western Australia was amended, allowing women to stand for parliament.

Born on a Geraldton sheep station in 1861, Cowan was nearly 60 when she stood as the Nationalist candidate for the Legislative Assembly seat of West Perth on a platform of social reform.

Cowan's election stunned half the world, including WA's Attorney-General, Thomas Draper, whose seat she won. Draper introduced the change of law that enabled Cowan to stand.

Cowan was only seven when her mother died and she was despatched to a Perth boarding school.

When she was 15, her father, Kenneth Brown, was hanged after shooting dead his second wife, Mary Eliza Wittenoom, daughter of J B Wittenoom, the colonial chap-

Cowan lived with her grandmother in Guildford until, at age 18, she married James Cowan, Registrar of the Supreme Court. Living between homes in West Perth and Cottesloe, they produced five children.

Cowan served only a single term but introduced several private member's bills and then, with a high public profile, embarked on an exhausting range of actions for social reform.

Cowan co-founded the Karrakatta Club in 1894, the first women's social club in Australia.

She lobbied hard until WA granted women the right to vote in 1899. A champion for the disadvantaged, she oversaw changes for disadvantaged children and prostitutes. She pushed for maternity hospitals and midwives rather than the normal home births.

Cowan was a cofounder of WA's branch of the National Council of Women and the Women's Service Guild. She was behind the creation of the King Edward Memorial Hospital for Women and served on its advisory board after it opened in 1916.

She was made a justice of the Children's Court and a JP in 1920. She helped found the Children's Protection Society and the Children's Court.

A champion for public education and the rights of children (particularly those born to single mothers), she served on a local board of education. She pushed for sex education in schools.

During World War I Cowan collected food and clothing for soldiers overseas and co-ordinated care for returned soldiers. She chaired the Red Cross Appeal Committee. In 1920, she was appointed an OBE.

Cowan was Australia's delegate to the 1925 International Conference of Women in the US, co-founded WA's Royal Historical Society in 1926 and directed plans for WA's 1929 Centenary celebrations.

Illness stopped her whirlwind social activities and she died on 9 June 1932, aged 70. A large public funeral was held at Karrakatta Cemetery where she was buried. In 1991, Edith Cowan

University purchased the Cowan home and had it reconstructed on the Joondalup Campus with TAFE assistance.

Cowan's great-great nephew, David Malcolm, became Chief Justice of WA's Supreme Court in 1988.

Researcher Hilary Silbert told Post Newspapers: "She's under-appreciated. If you go over east they don't acknowledge her at all in school books."

Ms Silbert revealed that after her historic election. Cowan gave her supporters brooches depicting a cracked gumnut.

"She said getting elected as a woman was a tough nut to crack," Ms Silbert said.

Bob's letters reflect a long and colourful life in Western Australia

Left; Ninety three years young, Bob Johnson Inset; Itchy Feet, The life and travels of Happy Bob

by Josephine Allison

BOB Johnson says that when he embarked on life as a young lad he always wanted to see what was around the next corner which was why he had so many jobs, the prolific letter writer tells Have a Go News

Ninety three years young, Bob, of Bassendean, has had letters published in Have a Go News in recent months on all manner of things. He's recalled times in World War II when the first American ships arrived in Fremantle to set up a base for troops after Pearl Harbour and the invasion of the Philippines and state ships heading up north with teams of shearers and seasonal workers, helping boost the economy in various towns, a far cry from today's fly-in, fly-out workers.

Bob, who generally keeps good health for his age, says he sometimes writes 10 letters a month to old friends. "I eniov every day I wake up," he chuckles. "In my younger days, I would take a path and that often led to other paths."

Born in Fremantle in 1927, Bob grew up in Hamilton Hill, attending primary school and Fremantle Boys School. During World War II he studied carpentry, fitting and turning and mechanics at Fremantle Technical College.

"In between, I enjoyed fishing and swimming,' he said.

"I had a newspaper round and the day Japan declared war five editions of the Daily News came out. I wagged school that day to cash in, but editions were limited and sold out. People were hanging out windows trying to get copies, it finished up a great day as the tips were coming thick and fast.

"After school, I was offered a job with Associated Engineers in Perth. The firm, consulting engineers from Singapore, had carried out the Collie distillation plant and the Boyup Book flax mill as war-time projects.

"I spent a couple of weeks in the Perth office, then was sent to Bindi Bindi to help survey an asbestos mine. When the firm closed, I was asked to go to Wodgina, a tantalite mine at Port Hedland in 1944."

In his book, Itchy Feet, the life and travels of Happy Bob he says: "From the start I got itchy feet and wanted to see the world. For the next 20 years I just wanted to keep on moving. Family life tied me down, also slowed me down."

"At Wodgina my first job was with a tinsmith making a thickener tank. This was my second time away from home and the mess was strange but I soon got the hang of it

About June 1945 Bob went to work on Fremantle wharf.

"At that time a labour shortage created what was known as the Seagulls Union," Bob recalls. "We did labour that the lumpers rejected as too dirty such as unloading boats of coal, superphosphate, sulphur and wheat."

Bob headed to Kalgoorlie from 1945–47.

"Me and a friend decided to go there by train on a working holiday while waiting for callup. We went to the Great Boulder mine by tram and secured work on the main shaft though I did spend a couple of days on the Christmas Eve shaft, one of the original shafts."

Bob returned to Perth but missed his callup as the war was ending, doing some work at Fremantle wharf before heading back to Kalgoorlie and working at various sheep stations up north at Wittenoom Gorge in 1947, Dean Mill, Manjimup and Broome meatworks in 1948 and the Big Bell mine in 1949.

Later, he worked at

Life changed for Bob in 1950 when he married June who he met at the Governor Broome Hotel. The couple went on to have five children, 10 grandchildren and 10 great grandchildren, June passing away in 2012.

The couple had an interesting life up north, working on Moola Bulla cattle station 20km west of Halls Creek. Several other jobs followed before Bob and his family finally settled in Perth, living in Mandurah and Bassendean.

Bob is a true West Australian with a colourful life which took him around the State. Now he's happy to write a letter or two and reminisce about days gone by.

Letters to the editor Submissions may be edited for clarity and space.

Dear Editor,

I READ with some surprise the article by Lee Tate 'The emerging and fascinating picture of true Aboriginal existence and culture' from the March issue.

A cursory check of the web concerning Bruce Pascoe's book should have caused some doubt in Lee Tate's mind about the veracity of the various claims made

In general, life for Aboriginals could be characterised as 'nasty, brutish and short'. It was no Arcadian existence and it is a disservice to try and reimagine the past.

In addition the following reading is recommended to balance ones perspective of the subject:-

The Passing of the Aborigines by Daisy Bates; Anthropophagitism in the Antipodes by James Cooke and William Buckley.

Claims of Aboriginality by the author have also been challenged.

John Blakey

Ed's Note - I have discussed this with Lee Tate and he says the following...

I am aware of some similar responses.

Pascoe's book has credibility because he uses material from explorers and pioneers' records and outlines scientific evidence. They do exist. More material will unfold, however the cards fall, due to renewed focus on Indigenous history.

We need to acknowledge all sides and let all parties have a voice in this approaching great debate.

Dear Editor,

THANK you for your interesting article in March Have a Go News about my claim for the WA Seniors card written by Frank Smith.

So the current WA government claim to be the most nationally generous seniors card benefit which is incorrect? That's cheeky!

When Canberra proposed to extend the age of their senior card to 62 it was fought. Today Canberrans still enjoy eligibility at 60, benefits which are also extended to them when visiting WA.

Through it's discriminatory that other state seniors are still eligible for benefits at 60, the WA action probably needed to be fought back in 2017.

Unfortunately, those to be affected such as myself were likely oblivious to such matters and those who understood the consequences didn't agitate enough. Meanwhile I will now sit back and wait impatiently to turn 65.

I doubt much will change but I appreciate you taking time to research and publish the article.

It's so good to see real journalistic skills demonstrated in your paper. Love your work!

LiveLighter Aged Care Games - Avon

AFTER being delayed due to flooding the Live-Lighter Aged Care Games were held on 25 March at the Northam Recreation and Aquatic Centre. Teams of seniors in care from the Avon region, dressed in their colours and themes. Along with carers and volunteers everyone came together for an exciting event. The games included seated hockey, seated passball, bean bag toss and skittles. There was much enthusiasm and lots of laughter throughout the day. The seniors practice these games throughout the year and on games day they all enjoy the atmosphere of competition. Northam Shire president, Cr Chris Antonio opened the games, congratulating SRCWA on holding the first event after the floods. Caitlin Morris, a student from Northam Senior High School, sang the National Anthem beautifully unaccompanied. SRCWA state president Phil Paddon was emcee for the day and announced the Champion of Champions winner for the round of games held during 2019/2020. The winning team was Cunderdin Health Centre WAGS with the highest score of 353 points. Unfortunately they were unable to attend so the trophy was presented to Cr Chris Antonio on their behalf. Congratulations to them. Volunteers from SRCWA Avon branch, SRCWA Perth and a group of volunteers from Fresh Start assisted for this event. SRCWA is very grateful to the staff at the Northam Recreation Centre for all their assistance. Entertainment was provided by Jim and Jenny's Country who entertained everyone throughout the day. Speed skater Alan Eades again amazed everyone with his demonstration of in-line skating. A healthy lunch was provided by SRC Avon branch and Earth Solutions which included soup, sandwiches, fruit and muffins.

The perpetual trophy and gold medal winners with 339 points went to Goomalling Twilight Club, the silver medal winners with 323 points were Dowerin Home Care, Gentle Gym and the bronze medal winners with 299 points were York All Stars. Everyone who participated was presented with a medal. We know that people are thrilled to receive these medals, and many hang them in their rooms or homes after the events. The winner of the best dressed team plaque was York All Stars who were all dressed as the Mighty Ducks, with the mascot Sir Quack a Lot. The oldest competitor was Adelaide Kothstein 94-years-young from the Northam Over 60s Group.

Thanks to all participants for making the day so memorable filled with much fun and laughter. Our thanks to all the volunteers who assisted on the day, without their support the LiveLighter Aged Care Games would not be possible. We would also like to thank our partner LiveLighter Healthway, the Shire of Northam and Department of Local Government, Sport and Cultural Industry for all their support.

HAVE-A-GO NEWS No. 349 APRIL 2021

Discovering more than you dreamed in retirement

Over 55 Canoe Club member Rayleen has a hydraulic lift fitted to the side of her car

by Karen Finlayson

YOU'LL never make it! You're too tall! It won't work! You're not tall enough!... Have you ever wanted to try something but nobody thought you could do it?

Sometimes it's others who fire the bullets and sometimes it's ourselves. This is a story about not being held back from something you wish to try, to disregard those negative thoughts and to paddle on regardless.

Rayleen used to worry constantly about her ageing mother. Was she eating well? Was she lonely? Was she happy? She loved her Mum and wanted the best for her, just as she loves her three children and wants the best for them. She knows this doesn't include them worrying about her. She wanted her children to have confidence in knowing she was doing what she wanted, meeting plenty of interesting people and living her best life.

With retirement on her mind it was important to Rayleen that she had lifestyle aspirations. Having no male friends and girlfriends with different interests, she found herself going to the footy alone, to the beach alone, everything alone. She wasn't unhappy, but she knew she did not want to become a hermit, especially in later years. It was important to find something to do that involved other motivated, like-minded people with a healthy outlook.

In the past Rayleen had played squash until she began a family, netball and then softball until her eyesight became a problem. She began karate with her kids ending up with a black belt 11 years later when her knees began playing up. While her family are always supportive, they are often surprised about where Rayleen's interests took her

Kayaking has been one of these surprises. Rayleen read about the Over 55 Canoe Club in the Have a Go News for at least 12 months before she finally phoned the club. The president filled her in on where to go, when to go and what to wear. It was a try-before-you-buy situation where she and other newbies were offered a club member's boat each. complete with life jacket, paddle and even a buddy. After a couple of weeks, a prospective new member would know if it was for them. Rayleen found herself hooked immediately and bought a boat.

But how could a person heading for retirement, not quite 145cm tall (4'9") get her 24kg boat on and off her car – with a roof much higher than herself? She was up a creek without a paddle, until her daughter and son-in-law solved the boat loading situation. They would call in at 6am on their way to work and back again later. It didn't take long before Rayleen saw a club member with a hydraulic lift fitted to the side of her car. Next thing, she had one too.

It surprised Rayleen joining the club how brought more than she could have imagined: "Once in the water it was magic" and she loved the club culture. It seemed tailor made to her dreams. She has retained that feeling ever since her first paddle. She has made friends with all sorts of people. She loves the many different interests people have, their motivation and their excitement for life. These are the folk she wants to be around helpful, respectful and comes from the sense of shared adventure in the little things - spotting the wildlife, sitting around the bank at morning tea after the initial paddle, sharing stories, or even quietly sipping tea. Seeing a pelican is enough for Rayleen to feel thoroughly rewarded for her efforts. Heading home, tired but happy; could life be better?

Rayleen has always loved her work in aged care and is not planning on giving up her current 20 hours a week anytime soon. It's a good life. She has found what she was looking for and she's thrilled to bits.

Tall or short, rich or poor, there is a way around it. And you might find more than you dreamed of.

If you are interested in paddling with the Over 55 Canoe Club please contact club president Chris Cocker on 0410 479 024 or club secretary Dale Winn on 0420 733 024.

UWA research study on heart disease needs healthy volunteers

HEART disease is the leading cause of death in Australia.

It is one of our biggest health problems, affecting more that 3.7 million people. It is also a huge burden on our economy. Any reduction in the incidence of heart disease will not only benefit a large percentage of our population, but will also have an extremely positive impact on our nation's economy.

A diet high in plant-based foods and beverages is associated with a lower risk of heart disease. In addition to vitamins and minerals, plant-based foods contain compounds called flavonoids, which are thought to play a key role in preventing heart disease. Importantly, flavonoids are broken down into smaller compounds by bacteria in the large intestine.

Researchers at the University of Western Australia are aiming to determine whether they can measure the levels of these smaller compounds in urine samples, as a way of estimating how many flavonoids you eat. To do so, they are asking for volunteers to consume four foods known to have the highest concentrations of flavonoids (black tea, green tea, apples, and cocoa) and then collect urine samples.

Findings from this study will be important for understanding how consuming foods rich in flavonoids may protect you from developing heart disease.

Sage advice on making the best of what you have especially time

by Jon Lewis

"MAKE the best of what you have," shared one of my lovely callers while was broadcasting my after-midnight talk show

Di had called in with a cheerful voice and made this very important point; it really struck a chord with me.

What you have could well be a finite resource. It could be your body, your property or perhaps your time. In many cases there could only be one of what you have. Why waste it? Why only use some? Is the rest saved for some special purpose or simply wasted? Time wasted, I believe, is the worst waste of all.

There can be many reasons for wasting time when you could be making the most of it. The easiest reason is often, "I am too tired" (said the bicycle).

For me in many cases this can be traced back to not allowing enough time for actual sleep. It can also be not preparing for sleep adequately. I know there needs to be some sort of serious exercise before I can truly have a good sleep, followed by a period of calm with no technology. What is it for you?

Like you I am sure, I don't like to see anything wasted. It is sad to see wasted food, it is annoying to see money wasted and it is certainly bad to see time wasted.

A plan can help, a written list can help too.

Making the most of a resource, I am happy to write, does not necessarily require more energy. Sometimes less energy and a little more planning will do it.

lovely weekend

might just require thinking about it on a Monday and looking forward to it through to Friday.

Can you imagine how nice that would feel? What would you look forward to come Friday?

If it is dollars and you can only afford a little, then make the most of that too.

For example, I enjoy taking my thermos with me, so a trip out can save the price of coffee for my darling wife and me. It is a lovely thermos and we have a lovely coffee machine, so I make the most of them. We enjoy the company of one another and like to make the most of that too.

It's strange how making the least of what you have seems oh so simple a path to slide into. The hours I have wasted on social media and the internet is almost criminal. If I had to pay for time, you could be sure I would use it more wisely.

So how do we know if what is being done is indeed a wise choice? How can we be certain?

It is, after all, lovely sometimes to just do nothing. To feel calm and relaxed.

I suppose the way to be certain, is to look at one of the words in the previous sentence... choose.

If indeed we did choose to do nothing, that is actually a choice rather than to just end up with a period of doing nothing. If it was a dedicated decision to partake in nothingness... then you could feel successful. For you have done as you set out. Do-ing with decision I feel is equal to creating and that is equal to living.

I love living.

So, choose.

By the way, if you say 'choose' when being photographed you can look younger. 'Choose'... click!

All the best.

HAVE-A-GO NEWS No. 349 APRIL 2021

Has Australia missed the boat with frozen pension debate for UK expats?

by Mike Goodall

I HAVE nothing positive to report on responses from the Australian Government, but the Canadian Alliance of British Pensioner (CABP) have been extremely proactive, encouraged by their Government.

We are continually being told by Australian ministers, MPs and senators that it is not possible to link social security agreements with trade talks. Yet that is precisely what the UK have done with the EU over BREXIT.

The UK are now in discussions with the European Economic Area Countries (EEA) about indexing UK pensions in those countries too.

Trade talks have been taking place between the UK and Australia. The fourth out of five planned rounds of talks, was completed last month. Australia may lose the opportunity of raising frozen pensions with the UK unless something is done immediately.

Following on from the chairman of the CABP's presentation to the Standing Committee on International Trade a resolution was passed in the Canadian House of Commons:

"That the House recognises that there are approximately 136,000 recipients of UK state pensions in Canada;

"That it recognises the UK government does not provide annual indexed increases to UK pensioners residing in Canada, effectively freezing their pensions at the levels they were at when they first claimed their pensions in Canada:

"That it recognises Canada provides annual indexed increases to Canadian pensioners who live in the UK;

"That it recognises UK pensioners living in the USA, Germany, Italy, Barbados, Bermuda, Israel, Jamaica and other countries receive annual indexed increases."

Frozen pensions represent a combined loss of over $500 million per year to the Canadian economy and taxpayers. It also forces thousands of UK pensioners in Canada to rely on Canada's social assistance programs. It is an injustice to both UK pensioners in Canada and to Canadian taxpayers:

The Canadian Parliament believes that now is the appropriate time for the UK government to negotiate a pension indexing agreement with Canada and that the government should press the UK government to open negotiations with Canada to remedy this situation as soon as possible.

This resolution is similar to the one that my wife and I presented in Australia in September 2019, which received a unanimous support. However, it has been 'put on one side' because of the Covid-19 problem. It is now time that this was raised again before it is too late.

Much is being done on our behalf but Australia seems determined to 'miss the boat'.

Am I UK State Pension Age?

UK Expats and Australian citizens born between 6 October 1954 and 5 April 1960, who have worked for a minimum of 10 years in the UK, will be eligible to claim their UK State Pensions from their 66th birthday.

For those born after 6

For those born after 6 April 1960 that the age that they can claim will increase by one month extra for every additional month of birth until 6 March 1961 when it will become their 67th birthday.

Anyone who would like to discuss this or any other aspects of their UK State Pensions, is welcome to contact Mike Goodall on 08 6364 0859, 0403 909 865 or via e-mail mikec goodall@btconnect.com.

WESTERN Australia's climate is getting hotter and drier. Catastrophic events like floods, droughts and bushfires are getting more frequent and more severe.

The possibility of climate change due to burning coal as fuel was first pointed out by Nobel prize-winning Swedish scientist Svante Arrhenius in 1896.

Now 125 years later, even the Morrison government is beginning to take notice.

Researchers at Ohio State University in the USA have found that putting a price on carbon is the cheapest, most efficient policy change governments can make to reduce the emissions that cause climate change.

They analysed the costs and effects that a variety of policy changes would have on reducing carbon dioxide emissions from electricity generation in Texas and found that adding a price, based on the cost of climate change, to carbon was the most effective.

"If the goal is reducing carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, what we found is that putting a price on carbon and then letting suppliers and consumers make their production and consumption choices accordingly is much more effective than other policies,' said Professor Ramteen Sioshansi, an integrated systems engineering professor. The study was published recently in the journal Current Śustainable/Renewable Energy Reports.

Many people think government action on climate change is coming too little too late and our children and grandchildren may suffer the consequences. But not everyone is taking this ly-interested as they saw the threats of bushfire last year associated with climate change."

She says Carbon Fee and Dividend is an efficient and transparent carbon pricing mechanism that drives greenhouse gas emissions reductions across most sectors of the economy.

Unlike a carbon tax the entire net revenue generated by the carbon price is returned directly to every citizen through monthly 'dividend' payments

There are several benefits to this approach:

Investors, producers, consumers and governments are all given an incentive to increase energy efficiency and reduce their consumption of carbon. The fee encourages greater investment, research and development implementation of clean energy projects.

The dividend protects lower and middle income families, maintains public support and gives consumers greater purchasing power, enabling all households to play their part in reducing climate change.

Carbon Fee and Dividend (CFD) would cause minimal disruption to the economy while giving a strong and positive signal to markets. A dividend instead of a tax would distribute costs across the economy and stimulate economic growth, while giving a strong and positive signal to markets.

A carbon fee would encourage new business opportunities to develop, produce, install and service innovative energy projects and create thousands of new jobs. Ms Erceg says CCL is lobbying governments to act on climate change. "We form electoral groups of volunteers who write to, meet and talk with politicians and others across the political spectrum.

"We are now talking to State politicians and local government. We plan to use their views to influence further up the political hierarchy.

"We also cooperate with groups with similar aims including Beyond Zero who are involved pressing for transitional jobs as the economy changes; Farmers for Climate Action and Doctors for the Environment.

"CCL can also provide speakers for other organisations on subjects like 'why is it getting so hot'? And 'opportunities to reduce our dependency on carbon'.'

Putting a price on carbon gives an economic signal to polluters. They can decide to discontinue their polluting activity, reduce emissions by decreasing their consumption of carbon or finding alternative lowcarbon options, or continue polluting and pay the community costs of it. she said.

An enormous effort required to reform aged care sector to deliver appropriate care

The government now spends $20 billion-a-year on aged care

by Lee Tate

AUSTRALIA is on the brink of aged care reform that is breathtaking.

Following 20 probes, inquiries and royal commissions over 20 years, Canberra has levers to direct $30 billion-a-year into aged care.

Yes, a massive $30 billion every year and more over time with inflation. The Federal Government has already committed an interim $500 million.

The nation has seen nothing like what's about to follow in the wake of the Aged Care Royal Commission's 148 recommen-

But politicians, health practitioners, economic advisers, care organisations and others are deeply divided over how this should all be done: how do we gather, spend and control this huge bankroll?

Even the two commissioners, retired judge Tony Pagone QC and former Public Service Commissioner Lynelle Briggs, have opposing views on how to tackle it.

Mr Pagone says because government controls have failed miserably: "a fundamental redesign is required" with an aged care commission that can control, regulate and maintain quality and safety of care.

But Ms Briggs says

only governments have the resources to deliver high quality and safe aged

"It would not be acceptable to taxpayers for more than $30 billion of public funds to be handed over every year to non-elected individuals operating outside the direct control of ministers to be spent as they see fit," she said.

The government now spends $20 billion-ayear on aged care and consumers add another $7 billion from their own pockets.

Australia has been spending at least $27 billion-a-year for so-called aged care.

The royal commission has revealed that about 18 per cent of nursing home residents have been sexually or physically assaulted and about 68 per cent are malnourished or close to Psychotropic druas were administered to 60 per cent of residents and more than half were in aged care facilities with unacceptably low levels of staffing.

The commission has called for an effective system of universal entitlement: a right for all older Australians to have access to quality aged care services when and where they need them.

The shift from what we have now to what is needed is going to take an enormous effort, as the population ages.

People aged 85 and over will increase from 500,000 (two per cent of the population) in 2018 to 1.5 million (3.7 per cent of the population) in 2058.

This "will coincide with the number of people available to take care of them", the commissioners

They set targets: clearing the 100,000-strong waiting list for home care packages, new training standards and a national registration scheme for care workers, a new star rating system for care providers, a timetable to introduce minimum staffing levels in nursing homes and limits on who can prescribe drugs to people in aged care.

They also called for an urgent review into nutrition standards for food in nursing homes.

Over 28 months, the commissioners heard from 641 witnesses with 10,000 written submissions, 6,800 phone submissions and mountains of research papers.

"Many witnesses gave harrowing accounts of their or their loved one's mistreatment in nursing homes or by in-home carers," reported Stephen Lunn in The Australian.

Canberra, over the lifetime of several successive governments, will now have to chart and follow the course to massive. essential improvements to aged care and how they Possibilities are: a lifelong levy on workers' pay, a fee for aged care consumers and a new tax (not politically palatable in Canberra, apparently).

Australia's attitude to aged care is about to change. We await the bot-

How stem cell nutrition may help ease the symptoms of arthritis

ARTHRITIS is painful inflammation and stiffness of the joints. Inflammation is part of the body's natural response to protect joints from damaged cells; to remove irritants and infection – but also to start the healing pro-

The most common form of arthritis is osteoarthritis. It begins in the cartilage and eventually leads to two bone surfaces rubbing directly against each other. This is not only painful, but very restrictive on daily mobility and flexion. This degenerative disease often needs joint replacement surgery.

How can adult stem cells help arthritis?

Research now shows that the body heals itself via the migration of adult stem cells from the bone marrow. Providing they can get to the tissue - adult stem cells can become new bone and cartilage cells and have been linked with an increase of lubricin (a protein found in joint fluid that acts like a shock absorber).

As we age stem cells migration naturally declines. By age 50 it has reduced by 50 per cent and by age 65 you only have about 10 per cent the number of stem cells you had in your bloodstream when you were 25.

Stem cell Nutrition encourages your body to naturally release millions of new stem cells - which then replace damaged cells anywhere in the body. The more stem cells you have in your bloodstream the bet-

Covid-19 poses a serious threat to health of older people

by Frank Smith

AT least 80 per cent of Australians aged over 70 years are at high risk of serious illness or death if they contract Covid-19.

A study by the University of South Australia found that people with blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes and cancer are more vulnerable to poor outcomes if they contract Covid-19 and having more than one of these conditions increases the risks.

The study involved more than 100,000 Department of Veterans' Affairs clients, nearly 90 per cent living in their home. More than 80 per cent had at least one risk factor for Covid-19, half of them had two risk factors, and 20 per cent had three or more risk factors, including immune-related diseases and diabetes. High blood pressure was the most common condition followed by heart disease.

Veterans living in residential aged care had slightly lower rates of high blood pressure but had higher rates of heart disease, respiratory conditions, and kidney disease.

University of South Australia Associate Professor Nicole Pratt deputy director of the Quality Use of Medicines and Pharmacy Research Centre, said the findings align with evidence from other countries where patients have been admitted to hospital with Covid-19.

"In the US for example, 70 per cent of older patients admitted for Covid-19 in the past year had high blood pressure, 43 per cent had diabetes and 29 per cent suffered cardiopulmonary diseases." she said.

"A quarter of the older Australians that we studied live with a condition like cancer or may be taking medicines that suppress their immune systems and one in five has diabetes. These conditions carry a far higher risk for Covid-19 than some other conditions."

The latest statistics released by the Federal Government show that 94 per cent of the 904 Australians who have died of Covid-19, were aged 70 years and older.

Since the study was completed, the Government has started rolling out the Pfizer and Astra-Zeneca vaccines to Australia's to older and more vulnerable people.

"Our findings highlight the urgent need for older Australians to get vaccinated as soon as they are eligible," Assoc Prof Pratt

The study was published in the Australian Journal of General Practice last month.

Some readers may be hesitant to get vaccinated because of safety concerns over the Oxford/ AstraZeneca vaccine, after 37 people in several European countries had blood clots after getting the jab, nine of whom

Professor Stephen Evans at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine said blood clots are fairly common, so they are bound to occur in some vaccine recipients if you immunise millions of people.

University of South Australia Associate Professor, Nicole Pratt

He said that the virus rather than the vaccine might be responsible for an increase in the occurrence of blood clots.

Health officials from the UK, the World Health Organization and the European Medicines Agency (EMA) investigated and all concluded that the vaccine is safe.

Given the risk of serious illness or even death amongst older people infected by Covid-19 it seems getting vaccinated is a no brainer.

Ed's note - Our columnist Mike Goodall and his wife Nicky had their first shot last month and said it was similar to having a flu shot. He said he felt a little sluggish the day after but also noted it didn't stop him from hitting the golf course for a full round.

National disability campaign #SeeME launches to an emotional response

#SeeMe participants with STEPS Employment Solutions staff members

Employment Solutions have launched their highly anticipated #SeeME campaign launch event. The national campaign, which features a video series, explores the realities of nine extraordinary individuals who face barriers to employment and highlights the importance of concentrating on the abilities of job seekers. This idea is embodied in the event's tagline of "employMYability"

The event featured the first screening of all nine participants' powerful stories, and also saw the nine participants and other speakers share their experience and insights with the audience.

The video series garnered emotional responses from the audience, as well as from the participants themselves.

Carmel Crouch, managing director of STEPS, was also present at the event and shared the importance of campaigns like #SeeME in changing the landscape for Australians with barriers to gaining employment. "STEPS Employment Solutions and the idea of giving equal job opportunities to young people with disabilities was what initially began what is now known as STEPS Group Australia in 1989,' Ms Crouch said.

Kerry Staines, chief executive officer of STEPS Group Australia, spoke at the event and shared her great confidence in what campaigns like #SeeME could achieve.

"This campaign really embodies our core message; that adults with disabilities, mental health issues, or any other barriers have so much to offer in the workspace," Ms Staines said.

"Our nine participants are such a small part of such a large group of amazing, qualified, and deserving people.

"I really hope that this campaign helps more employers see that good employees don't just come in one form.

"Hopefully, we can encourage more conversations about those barriers and the strengths of diversity.

While the campaign's launch was a great success, each participant has far more insight and experience that they look forward to sharing with the Australian community.

"It has been a great to share opportunity to share what it's like to try to overcome barriers in employment," one of the campaign's participants, Jessica, said.

"Inclusive workspaces start in the hiring process so working toward better knowledge and processes will surely highlight our abilities.'

Each of the participants stories are available on the STEPS Employment Solutions YouTube channel at https://youtu.be/TUXD jcGdjeg

Making the big transition into aged care - top tips for families

PERTH wealth management and accredited aged care adviser Peter Speechley says it is important for families to make early plans with their older loved ones to transition into aged care to reduce stress and make well thought out and cost-effective decisions.

Mr Speechley, wealth management director with HLB Mann Judd Perth, says it is an all-toocommon story for adult children to be faced with finding appropriate aged care for their mums and dads when the parents themselves are already in need of assistance.

'Sometimes discussions can be difficult but the reality in Australia is places in aged care accommodation are not available at the snap of your fingers - there are waiting lists for residential care but also even getting help in your own home." Mr Speechley said.

The Australian Institute of Health and Welfare calculates that Australians living to their mid to late 80s will experience "frailty years", on average three to five years of severe disability.

"People approaching retirement should be sitting down with their families and making known what their priorities and preferences are when it comes to their care," Mr Speechley

"Residential care is not retirement living, it is government supported and covers daily accommodation needs and personal care.

"There are also lots of misconceptions about aged care - particularly the cost. It can be expensive, and the system of Refundable Accommodation Deposits (RADS) can be scary for some but by planning properly, and depending on eligibility, you could for example consider renting rather than selling the family home and using the rent to part pay for aged care accommodation.

Mr Speechlev said there was much to consider when planning the transition to aged care but there were some simple steps which could help make the move easier for everyone.

- Maximise choice and avoid rushed decisions · Identify who will be responsible on your behalf for your financial, medical and living arrangements
- Treat aged care accommodation like choosing how you buy a house - where is it located, is it good value, can I afford it?
- Aged care is complicated consider professional advice.

"Moving into aged care can be a major upheaval but it's important to explore your choices as early as possible and decide what works best for you and your financial position."

Dolphins play more than us... and here's a wonderful way to watch them do it

by Chris Parry

THREE of my favourite minds have something to say about dolphins.

The most famous theoretical physicist, Albert Einstein, was drawn to once observe dolphins and remarked: "There's no question dolphins are smarter than humans as they play more.

Another eccentric mind is Douglas Adams author of The Hitchhikers Guide To The Galaxy. He wrote of dolphins:

"Humans think they are smarter than dolphins because we build cars and buildings and start wars. All dolphins do is swim in the water, eat fish and play around. Dolphins believe they are smarter than us for exactly the same reasons.

A younger great mind belongs to my son Tom (11). Lifting his head out of the water upon seeing his first dolphins swim around him, he yelled: "I can hear them clicking! They're talking to me!

Now who's to say which of those is the best quote about dolphins?

Quite often on television you'll see dolphin documentaries and it's fairly easy to find a dolphin experience in aquatic theme parks around the world. But I want to implore you to experience dolphins for yourself only 45 minutes from the Perth CBD. It is not just the greatest experience that you can have with dolphins but also the most ecologically and environmentally responsible.

Terry Howson's Perth Wildlife Encounters was founded on building a relationship with dolphins in the waters around Rockingham. For years Terry searched for the dolphins, swam alongside them but he never fed them. He just put himself in their world. Eventually, the dolphins decided he wasn't a bad bloke and they stopped swimming away from him.

He founded his business on strict protocols, including no feeding and that the dolphins had to be found each time they went out, rather than conditioning them by establishing a known area where the encounters could take place, so that the encounters fit into the dolphin's way of life. The crew find the dolphins, place the boat a safe distance in front of their anticipated path and you then enter the water. The dolphins can then choose to go around you, under you, circle you, roll around you or just disappear to do other things. It's up to them how they want to interact.

This approach to environmental tourism has resulted in Perth Wildlife Encounters winning prestigious tourism awards and induction into the Western Australian Tourism Hall of Fame.

We embark at Rockingham Jetty and as we step aboard the crew assess what size wet suit we're going to require.

The fit out of snorkels, masks and belts is easy. Next come quick lessons for those unfamiliar with snorkelling provided professionally by the crew. The skipper sends us out to the waters between Garden Island, Carnac Island and Kwinana.

As the search for the dolphins is underway our crew explain how we will enter the water and what the rules are. We are placed into teams that will step carefully off the stern into the water, holding onto the waist belt of the person in front of you. The water is deep and you're a considerable distance from shore, but you feel

The skipper spots some dolphins. I just have time to spit and wipe a mask clean before we all link hands around each other's belts and enter another world.

The water is clean and areen and the moment when the dolphins first appear is a lifetime memory. There's no food for them, it's them checking us out and we are so lucky.

At lunch we all talk about what we've seen, about the way the dolphins roll around us and click in a language that we can only guess at.

The crew are locals with skill, friendliness and passion who have been trained how to find the dolphins, not interfere with them, keep a safe watch on all of us and ensure our experience is special.

This experience is life changing because in a genuine and authentic way it provides an encounter with one of the most beautiful animals we share this planet with. It has changed the way I view how I want to encounter wildlife in the future. I want my children to be inspired by opportunities in life that excite and the way they think about the world around them.

MANDURAH IS THE PERFECT DESTINATION FOR A STAYCATION THIS AUTUMN.

Whether it's unwinding in the company of nature or revving up for an outdoor adventure, taking timeout with the grandkids or a romantic couples retreat, a foodie escape or a cruisy getaway with mates, be inspired by our top picks of what to do in Mandurah this Autumn.

A NATURE LOVER'S PARADISE

From the bushland to the waterways, the Mandurah Estuary and Peel Inlet is twice the size of Sydney Harbour and home to a unique abundance of wildlife, birds and marine animals that's worth exploring.

Jump on board a custom guided nature tour with Salt and Bush Eco Tours and you'll be amazed by this biodiversity hotspot right on your doorstep. There's plenty to delve into when you wander and discover the incredible surroundings on a bushwalking trail, glide on a kayaking adventure, go bird-watching or simply settle in for a peaceful evening of stargazing.

CRUISING THE CANALS

Mandurah is laidback central, so if you're searching for the ultimate in relaxation, then get comfy because your best vantage point is on the water.

Kick back on a Murray River lunch cruise while enjoying impeccable views, or go it alone and get grilling on an Eco BBQ Boat – no skipper's ticket required. When evening hits, there's no better way to take in the west coast's most spectacular sunsets than on a Sunset Tapas Cruise, with all you can eat tapas included. That's your Saturday night – and appetite sorted!

INDULGE YOUR TASTEBUDS

Mandurah is a mecca for seafood, renowned for its blue swimmer crab. If you don't fancy catching your own (although going crabbing is half the fun of it – just ask Justin Langer), there's no shortage of cafes, bars, breweries and restaurants for you to cure the cravings after a jam packed day exploring the amazing outdoors.

Check out the special package deals we have on offer this autumn below. Bags packed? We'll see you soon.

Escape to Mandurah for a midweek getaway this winter and enjoy a night at The Sebel Mandurah and a Scenic Dolphin Cruise with Mandurah Cruises.

Old York, Old York - a journey into Western Australia's first inland town

by Carmen Jenner

WITH rolling verdant and golden vistas reminiscent of the UK, it's easy to understand how Perth's first inland town earned its name of York.

With Mt Brown and Mt Bakewell watching over the valley, settlers arrived from the UK and made the 97km journey from Perth to the Avon Valley in 1831. It soon became apparent that the rich soil would yield favourable results and with this prediction, land cultivation and the thriving town of York soon followed.

Strolling among the preserved Victorian and Federation buildings of York is the best way to immerse yourself in the town's charm. On the main street of Avon Terrace, Penny Farthing Sweets inspires childhood memories with memorabilia and a rainbow of local and imported lollies. Across the road, the iconic York Motor Museum takes you on a journey of automobile history with a wide selection of vintage, classic, horsedrawn vehicles and racing cars, as well as motorcycles and retro cara-

York isn't just about sweets and fancy buildings and cars, especially if you found yourself in one of the grim cells in the Old Courthouse and Gaol in the York Courthouse Complex. You wouldn't want to have been a resident at the Old York Hospital either, built to serve the many men who suffered from the harsh conditions in the Goldfields. Now a private home, I wonder if the owners of this grand residence believe the many rumours circulating about their house being haunted?

You can put the theory of York's haunted past to the test yourself with a pub meal or stay at any of the heritage venues such as The Castle Hotel or the York Palace Hotel and Restaurant.

Set on five picturesque acres and with views of Mt Brown, Faversham House is one of the state's grandest colonial mansions offering country luxury, even if you're not attending a wedding or function in the ornate grounds. Owner Nola Bliss says: "I think what makes York such a unique destination is the historic buildings and its people and its proximity to Perth for both day trippers and those wanting a short

In such picturesque surroundings, it's easy to understand how the region has become such a hub for artists. The town is full of shops selling gifts, art and antiques. Among them Barclay Books and The Old York Mill at the entrance to town.

Also on Avon Terrace, Gallery 152 exhibits many Australian contemporary and multi-disciplinary artists and runs the York Botanic Art Prize launching in April 2021. The onsite Botanicalia Café is known for its ploughman's lunch, honey cake and pistachio slice.

Gallery 152 and Botanicalia Café owner Jenny Garroun says: "The region is a playground for artists working in any medium as the valley is surrounded by the beautiful and natural environment of the hills, Avon River, the architecture of its heritage buildings, wildflowers and night sky."

For collectors of fine food and home products, The Good Life Store sources produce from the region including the York Olive Oil Co - a visit to the nearby factory is also a delicious stop to indulge in York ice cream, preserves and bread.

Avon Park, on the banks of the Avon River, is a popular picnic spot and includes a skate park, barbecue facilities, nature playground and the infamous Swinging Bridge suspended across the river. It also showcases many varieties of wildflower blooms from August to October.

To take in York's full glory, the panoramic views from Mount Brown lookout, a few minutes out of town, is a great vantage point to plot your onward journey to the surrounding towns of Beverley, Northam and

Just as York became a central hub for pastoralists, gold prospectors seeking their fortune and fearless pioneers, the historic town continues to entice modern day explorers far and wide.

Watching the one of the great wonders of the oceans in the north west

Whale-watching is a must do when in Broome

by Lee Tate

TOURISTS can't get enough of whales and in Broome, like many thousands before us, we roar with delight when we see these magnificent maritime creatures breaching with a tell-tale splash that can be seen kilometres away.

Many of us on our charter boat are repeat whale-watchers, bringing new generations to observe and spread the word on one of nature's great wonders

Prices have gone up over the generation, of course, but so too have standards; of crew, boats, guides and information, bus connections, services and catering.

Whales comfortably hold their place at the top of the pecking order for tourist attractions. During the peak season, whale-watching operators are busier than a pod of feeding dolphins.

These days we can relax in comfort, perhaps with a glass of wine at sunset, as we scan the horizon in the hope of capturing humpback whales launching themselves from the depths or pec and flute-slapping, spy hopping or mother cows teaching their calves to swim.

Sea turtles, sea snakes and dolphins are a sometimes welcome added bonus.

Kat, our marine scientist guide on Absolute Ocean Charters' (AOC) 65ft boat, tells us that humpbacks, the star of tourist attractions, had earlier dropped in numbers to just a few hundred.

But, with protection and different human attitudes, there are now so many West Aussie pods that Broome claims the world's greatest number of passing humpbacks.

The whales give birth in waters near Derby, north of Broome and guide their newborn down to Antarctica, running the gauntlet of orcas and sharks. It's one of the longest hauls in the natural world.

To sleep, whales close down half their brain and one lung for just several minutes' rest. Then they do the same for the other lung and other side of the brain. This is because they have to consciously think of taking each breath, not breathing automatically like humans.

There's no guarantee tourists will see whales every trip, although at least from the charter operator AOC. With only one no-show of whales remembered over the many years they offer free follow-up trips or refunds.

Our skipper, Sam, sights a white splash of water on the horizon and steers us in that direction, easing back the pace when we get close and keeping a respectable distance from the protected animals.

Two black humps emerge and quickly sink beneath the gentle swell. We want to get closer. Whales are intelligent and inquisitive and our skipper resists the urge to rush in because the whales may swim over to us for a closer look.

Gradually, we get to come closer. A large fluke (tail) is thrust up into the air. Loud hoots from the kids aboard.

Some alert, quick-fingered snappers caught it with their cameras. (Well, I snapped half of it).

Distant sightings continue for a while, then we see a pair of whales, possibly a couple of teenage males which often travel together, break the surface. Then a brown sea snake slithers past the boat.

Majestic humpback whales have been migrating their way along the Kimberley coast for untold generations. This year, they left the cold Southern waters a couple of months early and mothers with babies are heading south a little slower, to the delight of late-in-the season tour-

Playful antics and nurturing sessions between mothers and their calves that have to quickly learning to breathe and swim are often spectacular sights.

Whales, Kat tells us, communicate with sounds generated louder than the noise of a jet take-off and with more diverse sounds than any other creatures known.

In the hope of catching some of it, our crew lowers an underwater microphone. But the whale-world banter isn't happening here.

The operator even produced a whale song specialty tour: "Oracle of sound and whale-whisper, Heather Jean, goes on a spiritual whale song tour to awaken your heart and mind to the connection we have with these majestic creatures of the deep.'

Whale-watching trips are constantly being reinvented. Bring 'em on! Various packages available and concessions also apply.

After perusing the iconic Old Cheese Factory arts and crafts centre we cruised down the winding, scenic drive alongside the Blackwood river to picturesque Nannup (place of parrots, or stopping place) founded in 1834 and home of the annual Nannup Flower and Garden Festival Tulip Time, to be held this year from 14 August until 5 September.

A lovely drive down the Vasse Highway and we arrive at the RAC's Karri Valley Resort, west of Pemberton for a couple of nights. Our lakeside room is perched above the calm clear waters of Beedalup (place of rest, or sleep) Lake. The gleaming trunks of the Karri trees on the opposite bank reflect off the mirror smooth water.

Birdlife abounds in the forest and on the lake. A pair of ospreys reside at the northern end of the lake and make spectacular dives into the water to capture the fat rainbow trout. We humans have to pay $10 to attempt the same feat. Other activities include archery, canoeing, swimming and visiting the on-site animal farm.

On the road again we make our way down to Northcliffe which boasts its Understorey Art Trail of outdoor sculptures. On previous visits we have explored and enjoyed Lane Poole Falls, Boorara Tree and the Shannon National Park. Point D'Entrecasteaux spectacular scenic walks with ocean views over the limestone cliffs. In season it is a great place to view the migrating whales or spot a seal.

We enjoy an ice cream before continuing on our tall trees cruise, passing through karri, marri and jarrah forest and mainland quokka territory. Yes, quokkas are living 'down south' as well as on Bald Island and Rottnest.

Alongside the blazing red Beaufortia are flowering along with tea trees and the white blossoming marri. Magnificent male blue wrens flit across the road, a young kangaroo hops out of our way and emus graze nonchalantly out in the lush green paddocks.

We sight a tiny relic of a house sitting in a paddock and make a photo stop. As I take my photo an amiable man in a white farm truck stops alongside and gives us a very cheery "g'day". He proceeds to tell us that this tiny relic of the past is in fact a single man's quarters from the bygone era of tobacco farming. It is located on his nephew's farm. With a "see ya" he drives off and heads back to his dairy

Cruising down Route 1 and we soon arrive in Denmark's Chimes Spa Retreat with a warm welcome from owners Elisabeth and Jack. Perched high up on Mount Shadforth Road. with views across the valley and down to Wilson Inlet, this is our favourite place to stay.

Along with dear friends from Albany we celebrate my 70th at the very popular Lakehouse, situated in the forest on the edge of a delightful little lake. Cobalt blue wrens flit around the colourful pretty cottage garden

Denmark has many excellent restaurants, wineries, art studios, stunning forests and the most incredible coastal scenery.

Our favourite coastal place is William Bay National Park which includes the postcard perfect Elephant Greens Pool, Rocks, Madfish Bay and Waterfall Beach.

The tranquil turquoise waters of Greens Pool are perfect for the whole family, children's swimming lessons are held here during summer.

After memorable days of scenic drives, delightful dining, bird watching and armed with a multitude of photographs we make our way back to Perth via Albany Highway, reflecting on the many amazing sights, historical relics and wonderful wrens.

Golden days can be found in WA's GOLDFIELDS...

KALGOORLIE BOULDER AND THE GOLDFIELDS OFFER A REAL OUTBACK ADVENTURE. A VISIT TO THE AREA PROVIDES A FASCINATING INSIGHT INTO THE REGION'S COLOURFUL GOLD RUSH HISTORY

At the very heart of Australia's Golden Outback lies the modern mining hub of Kalgoorlie and the Goldfields, offering fascinating insights into the history and heritage of the wild gold rush days.

The towns and small communities of the Goldfields were built on the hopes and dreams of fortune-seekers who flocked to Western Australia following the discovery of gold in the 1890s. Life was tough for these early gold diggers. While multimillion-dollar mining corporations have replaced the smaller gold prospecting operators, Kalgoorlie-Boulder has been transformed into a modern cosmopolitan town with reminders of the wild and vibrant early days everywhere.

Historic buildings, character pubs and even the brothels of Kalgoorlie-Boulder are remnants of more than a century of gold rush history. While across the Western Australian outback, the ghost towns of Leonora and Gwalia tell the story of early gold prospecting dreams that have long been abandoned.

The region provides diverse outback tourism experiences and holiday destinations. The natural landscape is a dazzling display of outback plains, huge deserts and salt lakes and rugged rocky outcrops. Winter and spring time transform the region with a rainbow of blooming wildflowers. Come and discover this epic and unique heartland of Western Australia.

GOLDEN QUEST DISCOVERY TRAIL

The Golden Quest Discovery Trail takes people from Kalgoorlie Boulder on an amazing loop trail from Coolgar-die to Laverton, through incredible Goldfields towns, rich in heritage, history and charm. This is a true outback adventure where you can explore the gold rush legends, landmarks, outback pubs and eerie ghost towns of what is still one of the world's biggest gold producing regions. The 965km trail leads you from the mind-blowing buzz of one of the largest opencut gold mines on earth, the Super Pit, to the striking beauty of the 51 steel sculptures on Lake Ballard. You'll find outback of the 51 steel sculptures on Lake Ballard. You'll find outback pubs oozing with character, perfect for enjoying a bite and a cold drink. There are a number of beautiful nature reserves and campsites, including the man-made lake, Niagara Dam. Tour the old prosperous town of Kookynie, which has a pub well worth the stop as well as old camps in the town of Gwalia, near Leonora, where the 31st United States President, Herbert Hoover, lived and worked. Linking in with the Golden Quest Discovery Trail, the Green Trail highlights sites in the Kambalda and Coolgardie areas with outstanding environmental, historical or cultural values such as beautiful woodlands and natural World-famous for two major events in Western Australia's mining history Coolgardie is the birthplace of the great gold rush of 1892 and the site of Varischetti's amazing mine rescue after nine days trapped in a flooded underground mine.

COOLGARDIE

Coolgardie was once the third largest town in Western Australia with two stock exchanges, three breweries, seven newspapers and 26 hotels. Explore the town's fascinating pioneering and gold rush history at the Goldfields Exhibition Museum and Ben Prior's Park. Enjoy a picnic and take in the view the first gold prospectors would have seen from Lion's Lookout. Explore nearby ghost towns and outback nature reserves such as Burra Rocks, Cave Hill and the freshwater wetlands at Rowles Lagoon. Today, reminders of Coolgardie's colourful gold rush history can be found in its charming grand heritage buildings and wide main street and it is also the starting point for the Golden Quest Discovery Trail self drive adventure.

KALGOORLIE

Try your luck at gold prospecting and fossicking and discover the region's diverse natural riches found in the tranquil eucalyptus forests, wide sweeping plains, dry lake beds, low lying scrub land and spinifex fields. As well as being home to a wide variety of bird species, the threatened bilby, chuditch, mallee fowl and dunnart

This natural bounty, combined with its striking landscapes, gold rush heritage and Indigenous history, make the Goldfields a truly unique outback getaway.

Why not start your journey of discovery at the Hannans North Tourist Mine or Museum of the Goldfields and follow the Golden Quest Discovery Trail, leading you from Kalgoorlie-Boulder Coldfields. into the Goldfields.

The town of Leonora is steeped in gold mining history, going back to the late 1800s. By 1908 the town was bustling and had seven hotels, general stores, tailors, and bakeries. A showcase of this history can be found on the Leonora Heritage Trail, which consists of 30 sites, including some buildings that are still standing today.

The walk includes a number of hotels and churches, a Masonic lodge, the old fire and police stations and the Barnes Federal Theatre. The journey begins at the Leonora Information Centre and Library. The building was once a hessian and iron building that housed the National Bank of Australasia but was rebuilt in 1903 as a weatherboard and corrugated iron building, the façade is mostly unchanged today.

Pop inside and have a tinker on the old piano. The ornate piano came to Leonora on the back of a camel in the late 1880s and lived in one of the town's hotels before being moved around and eventually finding its way to the Information Centre.

GWALIA GHOST TOWN AND MUSEUM

A real gem from the gold mining era is Gwalia Museum and it's one of the most fascinating places in the Western Australian Northern Goldfields. Meandering around the old town discover the magnificent Gwalia State Hotel, the old miners' cottages and other commercial buildings, left by residents in December 1963 when the Sons of Gwalia Gold mine closed.

A very special attraction is Hoover House, now a guest house, but originally built in 1898 as a home for the mine manager. Herbert Hoover, commissioned the house and later to become 31st President of the United States of America. Hoover designed the Oregon head-frame, now a landmark at the Museum, it is believed to be the only wooden incline headframe left in Australia. The museum also houses the country's largest steam winder (1000 hp), which was imported from England in 1912, as well as 'Midland', a woodline steam engine that carted over 30,000 tonnes of firewood a year to fire the boilers at the Sons of Gwalia Mine.

The dos and don'ts of fishing for a successful yellowfin whiting catch

Prize catch: a yellowfin whiting

by Mike Roennfeldt

my columns over the years will know that I'm ANYONE who has read a big fan of yellowfin whiting. They grow relatively big in whiting terms and spend the summer months in very shallow water. In the places I chase them they are usually in water knee deep or less and that adds to the fishing experience because it means I can usually spot the fish before I cast to it.

When people started catching them on poppers and stick baits a few years back I got even more interested. I much prefer using lures to bait and catching whiting on lures was a bit of a dream come true.

Well, I'm a bit embarrassed to admit that my first couple of tries at catching whiting on poppers didn't go too well. since convinced myself that they simply weren't in a surface feeding mood at the time. On the other hand, when the poppers failed to fire it did give me the opportunity to have a serious try at catching whiting on

I've caught them on little minnows surprisingly regularly in the past, but never as something I set out to do on the day. They were just happy accidents, usually a byproduct of a session chasing black bream with lures out on the flats. Now I was specifically

targeting whiting and I was pretty impressed with what happened.

The first-up scene was out on the flats in the Peel-Harvey estuary system and after a couple of hours trying poppers without luck we had not much over half an hour left before we had to head back to Perth. I made the switch to a little RMG Scorpion 52 lure in a brown trout pattern, a lure that had accounted for a couple of nice yellowfin whiting before down on the flats in Nornalup Estuary. What took place at Mandurah confirmed the first couple of fish at Nornalup were no

In 40 minutes I had around 15 hits for 10 hookups and five fish landed. The hits were surprisingly aggressive for a species that spends its life grubbing about on the bottom for small crustaceans and worms. Most were hooked around the mouth rather than inside, which suggests they may have been attacking the lure out of aggression rather than trying to grab a bite to eat.

In either case the experience opened up a new window of opportunity for someone like me. It demonstrated that whiting, yellowfin whiting at least, are genuine lure fishing targets, not just happy accidents.

The biggest plus with the whole thing is that plague-like of blowies have made bait fishing for yellowfin almost impossible in the past few years. The blowies almost always beat the whiting to the bait, but with lures, while you still catch a few blowies you get whiting as well. As a bonus, you're not forever putting on new bait or extracting swallowed hooks from those horrible little blowie mouths.

Footnote: I finally cracked the whiting-onpoppers hoodoo last year during a trip to Shark Bay, where I discovered that all it took was continuous twitching of the rod trip combined with a medium paced retrieve. But that's another story.

FOLLOWING ongoing testing of blue swimmer crabs in the Swan and Canning rivers throughout the season the Government of Western Australia would like to remind recreational fishers to remove the head. guts (mustard) and gills from crabs caught in these rivers before freezing, cooking or eating them. It is important that fishers land and transport their blue swimmers home as whole crabs, unless they plan to eat them immediately.

This caution is due to the ongoing detection of the toxic alga Alexandrium in the Swan River. This organism can produce paralytic shellfish toxins (PSTs).

KALBARRI EDGE RESORT

PST has been present in the Swan and Canning rivers, during the last two crab seasons.

PSTs accumulate in crustacea and mussels. Eating affected crabs and mussels may be dangerous and, in extreme cases, fatal. If you become ill after consuming crabs or mussels seek medical attention promptly.

Cooking or freezing whole crabs does not destroy PSTs. Cooking crabs with their heads, guts (mustard) and gills attached could potentially spread the toxin from crab guts into the flesh or broth. Freezing crabs (with guts still in place) could result in PSTs spreading to the flesh during thawing.

Comprehensive instructions on how to clean blue swimmer crabs properly, are available in a new flyer and a video to assist recreational fishers.

The Department of Health maintains a general warning not to eat shellfish including mussels, oysters, clams, pipis, scallops, cockles and razor clams from the Swan and Canning rivers, at any times. Urban waterways can contain heavy metals, microbial and other contaminants that may affect the quality of these types of seafood. Commercially bought WA shellfish undergo testing via quality assurance processes to allow consumer confidence that it is safe

Chefs arrive on our doorstep to celebrate Perth's Good Food Month

by Allen Newton

WITH WA's State borders opening up it means there's an influx of interstate chefs heading west.

Alanna Sapwell, the former head chef of ARC Dining in Brisbane, the Prince of Pasta, Mich Orr from Sydney and Morgan McGlone of Belles Hot Chicken in Sydney, will all be cooking during the month of April for Perth Good Food Month.

The emphasis for the month is to create culinary adventures to tantalise the taste buds of visitors to the city and this year will have a focus on being family friendly.

The constraints on large scale events and restrictions on interstate travel have meant the Perth Night Noodle Markets have been put in abeyance for the year.

But along with four feature events, will be 20 Friends of Good Food Month dining experiences taking place throughout April.

Tickets for these four events include multiple courses with wine and beer. They are:

Young Chefs Lunch presented by Citi at the Shadow Wine Bar, Alex Hotel, from 12.30pm, Sunday, 18 April with tickets costing $140.

The lunch features the work of three bright young chefs from the city's top kitchens under the mentorship of an industry veteran.

This year's chefs are Callum Snares from Cole Bowen from Le Rebelle and Henry Huang from Hearth, who will take over the kitchen at industrial-chic Shadow Wine Bar at Good Food food, drink and travel journalist, Max Veenhuyzen. Esmay Pop-up with Hearth Restaurant will have sittings from 6pm on Tuesday, 20 April with Month's hotel partner,

Shadow Wine Bar, James

Alex Hotel and hosted by tickets costing $140.

Esmay is the travelling pop-up restaurant of Al-anna Sapwell, the former head chef of ARC Dining in Brisbane and Saint Peter in Sydney.

For this one-off dinner, Esmay will team up with Jed Gerrard's fire-fuelled Hearth Restaurant, to combine their shared passion for hyper-seasonal, regional produce championed by local producers.

From Noma to Nashville: Belles and Drasko's make Hot Chicken will be aboard The Raft, boarding at Barrack Street Jetty No. 5 from 6pm, on Wednesday, 21 April with tickets costing $150.

The event is about putting the 'fine dining' in 'fried dining' with duties shared by Drasko Jankovic of Drasko's Hot Chicken, a fine dining-obsessed chef who uprooted everything to move to Copenhagen to work at world-renowned restaurant Noma.

The other is Morgan McGlone of Belles Hot Chicken, a trained chef who took residency in Nashville to work and learn from acclaimed Southern style cooking chef Sean Brock.

Mitch Orr's Festa de Famiglia on The Raft, boarding at Barrack Street Jetty No. 5 from 6pm, on Thursday, 22 April with tickets costing $170.

Mitch Orr began his career in a Parramatta pub, and has since cut his teeth in some of Sydney's highest profile kitchens including, Pilu at Freshwater and Sepia, along with overseas stints, including a chef take over series at London's Michelin starred Lyle's and hosting his own pop-ups in Singapore.

This exclusive event will take place on The Raft and will be hosted by Max Veenhuyzen.

People paying with a Citi card are being offered a 20 per cent discount on feature event tickets.

Venessa Cowell, Head of Nine Food Events which organises Good Food Month said the group believed it was more important than ever to support the Perth hospitality and dining industry and to throw our support behind the venues that we love and those we take for granted as being part of the fabric of Perth.

Her comments were backed by head of digital sales and marketing at Citi Samantha Elliott who said with travel being difficult at the moment it was the perfect excuse to explore the culinary adventures available in the city.

More information and tickets are available from goodfoodmonth.com.au.

Refuge sends out SOS to save seniors

PERTH'S oldest animal charity is asking the community for assistance in rehoming a number of senior dogs which have been either surrendered by their owners or rescued from pounds across Perth.

Refuge president Karen Rhodes says that while there are genuine reasons why some owners give up their older dogs, the home is finding that too many people are refusing or unable to pay veterinary cost for their pet.

Ms Rhodes says that senior dogs have many benefits for older owners who would like the companionship of a dog, but are unable to make the 15-year commitment involved with acquiring a puppy.

The Home has a 'Seniors for Seniors' program – which has been successfully running for many years – that is aimed at uniting dogs over seven years with older owners.

Anyone interested in making a donation to the Home's senior dogs can visit the refuge at 30 Lemnos Street in Shenton Park, go to www.doghome.org.au, or phone 9381 8166.

Community spirit and sheer determination the key for Guildford market organiser

Bromwyn Facer

by Allen Newton

BROMWYN Facer may not be able to see much of it, but there are few people who know Stirling Square in Guildford better than her.

She's been traipsing the square as the organiser for both the Guild-ford Twilight Markets and the Stirling Square Market – Guildford for nearly 20 years.

And because she is legally blind has had to learn where every hole in the ground and every undulation is, but that hasn't stopped her from developing some of the most successful markets in the State.

Between them the twilight and Stirling Square markets attract more than 15,000 people a month.

Bromwyn started her association with Stirling Square with the first Guildford Heritage Festival staged in 2000 and the first markets held in 2002, with four held throughout the year and three in 2003 and becoming a regular event in 2004.

She says there had been a lot of talk back in the early days about bringing back the early colonial tradition of the markets and how good it would be to do something like that again.

"It was like a light bulb going off, market in the square, we can do that," Bromwyn says.

And over the years she certainly hasn't let medical conditions get in her way, seeing them rather as challenges to continue to improve the markets.

The first markets had around 16 stall holders, mainly with people from around the Swan Valley, at a time when markets in Perth were only just starting to appear.

Bromwyn believes Guildford's historic nature, with its James Street strip of antique and bric-a-brac shops and the markets have gone hand-in-hand, helping to build Guildford's reputation as a destination.

"People say: we really want to go to Guildford, it's such a beautiful place and it's a bonus that you have a market there"

And Bromwyn says that has contributed to the unique nature of the markets.

It's also easy to get to with the Guildford train station just across the road.

"In the early days it was a lot of home-baked products and jams, a lot of local produce, home-made toys, soft toys, Manchester, crocheted teatowels, a lot of the kind of things you'd expect to see in a church fete.

"Now, it's anything from sculptors and potters, metal art, artists working with all sorts of different media, a lot of hand-made, high quality children's wear and the pet market has really taken off, not just the treats, but collars and accessories."

The markets are often used as a venue for antique car clubs who want to show off their much-loved vehicles to the public.

Bromwyn says the market attracts a lot of visitors who come with their dogs, but audiences come from far and wide with exit surveys showing they are not just locals, but a lot of people from the hills, and north of the river

"People for the most part are looking for things they can't find elsewhere.

"A lot of people want to say they have met the person who made a particular item and has told them the story behind it. A lot of people like that."

Many market goers are regulars looking to restock supplies of jams, relishes and preserves, or oils and candles and even custom-made clothing.

The markets also have a great family atmosphere. Bromwyn says it's a venue where people can throw down a blanket under the shade of the sugar gums and the kids can enjoy free activities.

"The kids can run around and play, and it's safe, it can be a very inexpensive day out.

"I think a lot of our success comes from the venue. It's one of the more attractive locations to be in for markets, with its historic surroundings, shady trees and grassy swathes which make Stirling Square a welcoming place, especially for children.

"People can come down and take a stroll through the market and then go across the street and take a look at what's on offer at the antique and bric-a-brac shops.

"Guildford is a place you can spend the day, it's a destination."

Bromwyn says the markets also play a role in building local community spirit, giving locals an opportunity to get out and mingle with each other.

"They are good for our town," she says.

The Guildford Twilight Markets operate on the first Saturday of every month from October through to April from 5pm to 9pm.

The Stirling Square markets are held from 9am to 2pm on the third Sunday of each month from February through to November.

by Tony McManus, Host, Saturday Night Show, 6PR Perth.

MOST of us remember our first kiss; our first love. The arrival of first child; arrival of first grandchild. The car in which you brought the baby home from the hospital. You know where I'm going; a perennial 6PR talk topic just there.

Many remember the first car, that first drive. The feeling of both exhilaration and freedom on begging, borrowing or stealing your first real car.

It is often a car and what you were doing in life during the years you owned a particular car, that provides the best memories. As you read this, your mind has already reflected on those early years as an owner driver.

My first car ownership story, a beautiful old Rover 2000 provided one of life's most memorable car driving ownership experiences. But that will have to be a story for another 'long lunch' occasion.

But I can share my first great WA driving adventure, which involved two new Mitsubishi Pajero and a great bloke named Phil, then the WA Mitsubishi state manager.

Our kids were young; around 10 and six years. Phil arranged for both families to take a couple of new Pajero Exceeds, for a big drive to Monkey Mia. The flies at Cataby Roadhouse, the excruciating heat, the walkie talkies between the two vehicles, are talked about with affection 20 years on. As are the magnificence of the dolphins.

Stunning memories with Mitsubishi Pajero, family and great friends.

The "Paj" Exceed was great back then, top of the range, full size family 4WD. Smooth, quiet and effortless.

That was 2001. Disap-

That was 2001. Disappointingly not much has changed.

It was somewhat surreal to drive the current model Mitsubishi Pajero Exceed; looks the same, drives about the same, notwithstanding the diesel engine. But feels like an early model iPhone; fantastic at the time, but we've moved on.

However, for a week or so I loved reliving the Monkey Mia drive of 2001.

So it was with some in trepidation a fortnight later, I spent a week driving the brilliant Mitsubishi Eclipse Cross. It turns out to be a class act in many ways. Much to love and all from around $30,000; up to $40,000 for the top of the range Exceed version. An affordable SUV with a 1.5-litre, four-cylinder turbocharged petrol engine, all-wheel drive.

There is plenty to enjoy here, including technology, comfort levels and design. In many ways reminiscent of the old Pajero, only smaller. A pleasant surprise for sure. It sits somewhere between an ASX and an Outlander; the Exceed I drove was importantly, just good fun.

Make no mistake; this is a cluttered segment of the smaller SUV world. Every carmaker is churning these things out; Mitsubishi does it really well.

And after a week of running around Perth, I was left in little doubt many Western Australian families will be creating new memories as owner drivers of the updated Mitsubishi Eclipse Cross.

Preserve your memories by converting old films with DiskBank

BEFORE the days of smart phones and social media, the act of recording on ciné film was reserved for life's most precious moments.

As time passes, old film footage slowly degrades.

In the early twentieth century, film reels were not designed with longevity in mind, often using unstable chemicals to improve the quality of the picture.

Many films shot during the 1930s/40s will eventually succumb to what's known as 'vinegar syndrome', a decomposition process that releases a vinegar-like odour.

As the film ages, it will continue to deteriorate until it is damaged beyond repair.

Older recordings are at greater risk, but even 8 and 16mm footage shot five years ago has already begun to break down and lose quality. Now is the time to take action and ensure your priceless recordings aren't lost forever.

One of the best ways to preserve your footage is to take it to Disk-Bank. Proudly based in WA for more than 20 years, DiskBank uses innovative technology to convert historic films, videos, images and audio recordings into modern, digital formats.

If the film has already begun to decay or develop mould growth, DiskBank can take steps to revive your footage if the damage has not spread too far.

DiskBank can transfer your recordings to DVD, Blu-Ray, USB or digital files, with the latter being the recommended format.

Have a Go News readers are entitled to an additional 20 per cent off. Simply mention the Have a Go name to claim your bonus discount.

The aroma and flavour of wines depends on the terroir

by Frank Smith

TERROIR is a French term used to describe the environmental factors that affect a wine's character, including its unique microclimate, soil, aspect and viticultural practices.

The concept of terroir has been disputed by some researchers and wine experts, however a chemical analysis of Malbec wines from Argentina has shown that the terroir can be reliably detected in different vintages.

Ariel Fontana at the National Scientific and Technical Research Council used liquid chromatography to quantify the presence of 27 compounds including antho-cyanins, phenolic acids, flavanols and flavonols in Malbec wines from 2016, 2017 and 2018, each produced under standardised conditions in different 'parcelas' of a vineyard in Mendoza province. Eleven of 23 'parcelas' could be identified by chemical analysis with 100 per cent certainty, and the other 12 could be identified with up to 83 per cent certainty. The vintage could also be pinpointed.

This will help solve the problem of wine fraud where cheap wines are passed off as expensive vintages.

Clandestine Vinevard Malbec 2020 is a deep red, soft yet elegant wine from Karridale, one of the coolest subregions in Margaret River. The gravelly Karri loam soils make their Malbec vines produce low yielding, distinctive and intensely flavoured fruit. The fruit was open fermented and pressed into French oak barriques for malolactic fermentation and maturation for 15 months. Vegan friendly. RRP $28.

Sauvignon Embers Blanc Semillon 2020 is a blend of 70 per cent Sauvignon Blanc and 30 per cent Semillon fruit. The nose shows plenty of kiwi fruit, lemon grass, passionfruit and lime aromas. Semillon's citrus and floral aromas complement the passionfruit of Sauvignon Blanc. Cool nights last year resulted in fresh, crunchy fruits with crisp acidity. This is a wine that can be enjoyed as an aperitif or with almost any food of your choice. Drink over the next 18 months. RRP $18.

Clairault Margaret River Chardonnay 2018. The aromas of this wine are fresh and vibrant, including white pear, peaches, braised nuts and lime zest. White fruits, jasmine flower and brioche flavour the palate with natural acidity and dense stone fruit flavours. The finish is long and persistence. Cellar for up to eight years, or enjoy it for its freshness now. RRP $28.

Forester Estate Shiraz 2017 is a medium-deep red wine with purple hue. The aroma shows aniseed, pepper, boysenberry and milk chocolate, with the toasty oak and an underlying meaty complexity. The palate is medium bodied with soft silky tannins and a pleasant mouthfeel and complex characters of aniseed, pepper, violet, boysenberry and subtle oak. Best drunk while young and fresh. RRP

Robert Stein White Label Riesling 2020 this is a classical dry Riesling from Mudgee, NSW. Robert Stein's vineyard was one of the few in NSW to escape damage from bushfires and especially smoke taint last year. The bouquet is aromatic with aromas of lime and lemon and the palate dry and crisp with citrus overtones. This wine makes a great appetiser or pairs with seafood. Drink while fresh or cellar for up to five years. RRP

Easy, tasty garlic and parsley breadcrumb braciole with mushrooms

by Vince Garreffa

THESE little meat rollups are easy, tasty, not expensive and people will think you worked all day to make them. They can be served with a nice risotto or you can cheat like me by using tasty boiled rice.

Ingredients for two

- · 8 thin single slices of yearling beef girello
- breadcrumbs
- · continental parsley
- garlic
- white wine
- · sea or lake salt to taste · freshly cracked black pepper to taste
- mushrooms olive oil
- · rice (boiled with garlic and parsley)

Sauté some sliced mushrooms in olive oil, salt and pepper for two minutes then add a small amount of white wine and cook for two more minutes until tasty but not too wet, then set aside to cool

Prepare your fresh breadcrumbs with garlic and continental parslev in a blender and set aside.

Now take your slices of girello and bash with a mallet to tenderise and thin out the steak. If you have holes in the meat you have bashed too hard. Remember bashing meat between plastic makes it easy.

Once you are happy with your steaks put some of the mushrooms across the middle of the steak and sprinkle the breadcrumb mix over the steak and the mushrooms. Now roll the steak and put two toothpicks in each roll to hold together. Fry the rolls in olive oil and a little salt and pepper at high heat until they are a little brown for about two to three minutes then add a splash of white wine. Put a lid on and cook to your liking. I like them a little rare.

Serve on top of rice boiled with garlic, italian parsley, salt and pepper. Decorate toothpicks with mini mushrooms or olives and pour meat juices from the frypan over the meat on the plate.

Name this dish after your family. You will be asked to do it again and again. I have passed this recipe on to my grandchildren it's that special.

A LOVELY autumn day beckoned us to historic Guildford and lunch at the Rose and Crown Hotel. Before lunching we had time to check out Dr Russell's Imaginiarium, a quirky shop full of curios which brought back childhood memories for us Divas.

Just as fascinating was the Museum of Natural History and Taxidermy both of which are in James Street. After a cup of coffee and watching the world go by, we hot footed to the hotel.

They offered an under $25 Garden Bar Menu available from Friday-Sunday 11am-late.

We chose spiced cauliflower tacos and a vegetarian frittata.

The spiced cauliflower tacos looked colourful and appetising. Disappointingly the cauliflower was only just warm, and over-cooked. The accompanying salad underneath had a crunchy flavoursome texture enhanced by the chipotle aioli. Unfortunately, the soft tacos lacked flavour. This hasn't deterred us from another visit in future.

The vegetable frittata was just perfect, very light (almost as light as a baked custard). It was full of vegies, and although the serve was generous it didn't leave this Diva feeling uncomfortably stuffed. The rocket was very fresh, in fact it tasted as though it had just been plucked from the earth, the fetta, red onion and tomato that was tossed with it was a great accompaniment. Very enjoyable indeed.

The outdoor dining area was well patronised by all ages enjoying the ambience afforded by beautiful trees and very friendly staff. Because of its history, it is rumoured that spirits wander around the premises, but we only saw spirits in glasses.

Check Google for the interesting history of this hotel.

Brunch with T - a cultural find in Mount Lawley inspires the appetite and the soul

by Tahlia Merigan

I'M glad to be back checking out our brunch options around town. Lockdown put a stop to our February column and then a hospital admission stopped me in March. but I found a little gem in Mount Lawley to review this month.

Local and Aesthetic is a café in a lovely large space which offers visitors the opportunity to view and buy some spectacular indigenous artworks in the gallery, a retail space selling records and a shop selling Indigenous books and products. There's also sports massage and pilates classes on site. It's a large airy spot to while away some time.

Only opening this year, the owner's mission is to celebrate WA, while paying respects to our first people and utilising some bush tucker ingredients in the menu. It has a very Australian feel paying homage to some fun dishes including numbat toast (vegemite and cheese toasty) and the polony sandwich.

So I took along Jen (our editor) and her partner Ron to kick off the return of this column.

Jen said she couldn't help herself and picked the polony and sauce sandwich ($14) freshly shaved mortadella with bush chutney on a semisour white loaf. It was loaded with meat and she said it reminded her of her childhood. The bush chutney was delicious and the mortadella melted in the mouth. She said the only downside was the sandwich had sat under the pass (service) lights and the bread was not as soft and fresh as she would have liked, but it still got a big tick all the

was homemade damper with a parmesan omelette, holy smokes bacon and bush chutney. The damper was light and fluffy and the omelette was very tasty. A nice take on the classic bacon and egg roll.

I went for a healthy option of the roast pumpkin ($18) a serving of roasted pumpkin, local honey, oreen tahini, macadamia, poached egg and salt bush on sourdough. This was a really enjoyable dish which I would definitely order again. The honey wasn't too sweet and the nuts and tahini gave it a boost providing texture and flavour.

Jen spotted the Pinjarra cake ($6.50) when we ordered at the counter amongst the selection of goodies and couldn't go past it. This delicious homemade cake was dense and oozed syrupy goodness and we all enjoyed a taste although she was reluctant to share.

We washed down the meal with a short mac ($3.50), an iced coffee ($6) and a refreshing green juice ($7.50). We did spot the Kirk's Kole Beer on the menu too, which made Jen and Ron reflect again on their youth.

The airy feel of the cafe is welcoming and the concept of the shared space promoting local retail provides an interesting addition to the area.

Parking is easy with a car park available underneath Second Avenue Shopping Centre along with street parking. There is also a bus stop nearby.

We admired the concept and look forward to returning for another sample of the menu. All dietary requirements are catered for and we all enjoyed the opportunity to explore the retail options and support another local enterprise.

ADVERTISING FEATURE LEGISLATION AND BEAUTY A

Fresh fruit harvesting from local suppliers is underway... especially for WA locals

by Noelene Swain

THIS year's harvest of apples and pears is now well underway and as I write the local community of Donnybrook is in the final stages of preparation for the annual Donnybrook Apple Festival. Timed around Easter each year, this is a community event that provides a focus for travellers to pause and celebrate the role of the apple industry in the region.

The southwest is one of the cleanest and greenest growing environments in the world. Fruit production is just one of the many agricultural industries that thrive in its fertile soil. Winemaking, olives, and other gourmet fare are all increasing in production in the region. The Apple Festival gives locals a chance to showcase what our beautiful town can produce and helps to create a sense of community and belonging.

In WA the apple and pear harvest occurs from March to June, commencing with the first picked varieties Galaxy and Gala apples and Red Sensation and Bartlett pears. These are quickly followed by crops of Fuji, Kanzi, Pink Lady and Bravo... so let's get crunching.
This season, local growers are faced with one of the most difficult growing seasons on record and are calling on shoppers' support to buy fruit that may be hail marked, sun blemished or colour challenged. These visual characteristics make no impact of the premium eating experience - skin blemishes don't impact on flavour.

Apples and pears are extremely nutritious and should be an important food in our eating regime. Apples are rich in antioxidants and the soluble fibre pectin, which are both known for their heart protective capabilities. Dietary fibre reduces the risks of some cancers and helps to control blood sugar levels, which is important to diabetics. Interestingly, pears are one of only two food products that are non-allergenic, making them ideal for introducing solids to babies and for people on elimination Research carried out by the University of Western Australia (UWA) and Edith Cowan University (ECU) has shown the consumption of apples has a direct impact on humans by improving cardiovascular health.

The science behind how apples assist human health validates the health benefits of apples long advocated by the saying: "an apple a day keeps the doctor away'

Apples are high in flavonoids (a type of antioxidant), which are concentrated in the skin rather than the flesh of apples so you should eat the whole fruit to obtain the health benefits, says Dr Catherine Bondonno who worked on the study.

The apple study screened the flavonoid content of more than 100 apples in Western Australia, and identified apples that are high in flavonoids, including Pink Lady™ and Bravo™ branded apples.

So tuck into some brightly coloured local apples and enjoy them 'skin on' to maximise the health benefits. To increase your consumption of fresh apples, simply add to your daily breakfast cereal, use to add crunch to your salad or eat an apple or pear as an in-between meal snack you can spice things up by trying a different variety each day.

Whilst the weather is warm, it's best to store apples and pears in the fridge to ensure they keep that freshly picked crunch.

Fresh is best with WA apples and pears, yet they are just as delicious cooked in savoury and sweet dishes. Generally, the sweeter the fruit, the better it will perform in a cooked recipe. Grab an apple and pear today and enjoy the recipes below:

Royal Gala apple

New season apples: Good news for those who love to bite into a crisp and juicy just-picked apple. The first of the much-anticipated new season apples are now on greengrocers' shelves. Look for Royal Gala and Galaxy varieties. They are perfect for school snacks. Especially during the hot weather, be sure to keep apples in the fridge. Apples can be kept for a couple of months by storing in accurately controlled cold storage

Autumn giant plums: The name says it all, as these lovely, large fruit are the last of this season's stone fruit to arrive on the scene. They ripen slowly, keep well, and have very juicy, sweet flesh, even though they remain firm when ripe. Simply divine and leaves a wonderful lingering memory of the stone fruit season.

Packham Pears: Buy when they are firm and green and keep at room temperature. They usually take about a week to ripen to their sweet, juicy best - you'll find they are ready to eat when the skin is tinged yellow. For a simple autumn dessert, melt a little butter, cinnamon and caramel syrup together and pour over pear slices in a heatproof serving dish. Grill until browned and tender. Yum!

What's fresh in the market for April

Parsnips: Mashed, chipped, or roasted, this sweet peppery flavoured root vegetable has had a resurgence of popularity and it's no wonder. Parsnip keeps well and there's very little waste. Dress with a little fresh orange juice or rind, olive oil and freshly ground black pep-

Sweet corn: Luscious juicy cobs are now plentiful and well-priced and they are a perfect solution to school holiday snack attacks. Use as soon as possible after purchase and cook for a short time only - two minutes in the microwave is plenty. You may prefer them cooked on the barbecue, either whole or in chunky slices threaded on skewers and brushed with good olive oil. Cook only until the kernels take on a lightly

Smart Homes will help people live in their own homes for longer

State-of-the-art technology assist people to live their homes

by Frank Smith

SMART home technologies can be designed to assist older adults, especially those living in rural areas, to continue living at home.

In 2019, McLean Care

– a specialist not-forprofit regional aged care provider – received a Commonwealth Home
Support Programme
(CHSP) innovation grant from the Department of Health.

As part of the grant, McLean Care partnered with researchers from Monash University's Emerging Technologies Research Lab and Deakin University's CADET Virtual Reality Training and Simulation Research Lab to trial smart home technologies in older people's homes.

McLean Care recruited 23 households in regional NSW and provided them with a wide range of commercially available smart home devices with diverse functionalities. Each household was able to select a combination of devices suited to their household needs and the physical layout of the home.

Monash University researchers undertook interviews by home visits, phone calls and indepth video calls to understand participants' experiences with the technologies.

McLean Care collected user reviews from the participants on the devices that they had used and administered a short end-of-trial survey to capture their interest in keeping the devices, paying for them in the future and overall feedback on the project.

The main smart devices trial included:

Google Home digital voice assistant which provided voice-activated control of other smart home devices; access to music, news, weather and other information; and a touch screen and voice-activated tablet for video calls.

Aeotec smart lights consisting of smart light bulbs (installed in existing lamps) controlled by voice activation, push buttons (placed near beds and chairs) and movement sensors.

Sensor-activated coloured lights were used to remind participants of everyday activities such as taking medication and opening garage doors.

A Kogan smart kettle which is hands-free and voice controlled.

Aeotec smart switches, controlled by smart buttons, voice activation, sensors and/or tablet were trialled in 10 households and connected to existing appliances such as pedestal fans.

The Remotec air-conditioner Infrared (IR) controller was also installed at five homes to connect air conditioners to Google Home and respond to environmental conditions automatical-

Deakin University researchers collected electronic data from the devices showing participants' usage patterns, user reviews and endof-trial surveys. This helped them to identify the usability challenges, and hopes and anxieties older people have of smart home devices.

"Despite the many benefits smart home devices can offer the elderly population, many older Australians are concerned about being left behind in the digital age, highlighting the need for proactive initiatives to help bridge this gap," said Professor Yolande Strengers of Monash University.

The researchers recommended smart home devices should be offered as optional extras for in-home services, providing opportunities for seniors to gain digital living skills.

"The Smart Homes for Seniors project was designed to address the research and knowledge gaps relating to older people's use of smart home technologies. We want this project to dispel the stereotypes around older people's interest and capacity to engage with emerging technologies," Professor Strengers said.

"Our research has enabled us to understand how smart home devices could support older people's wellbeing and their ability to live independently. It also identified certain challenges they experienced when using smart home devices."

The study confirmed that technology can support positive ageing and create increased opportunities to age in place without loss of independence.

Another important aspect of being able to live independently at home is health. Australian company HSC Technology Group Ltd. has integrated a CSIRO-designed home monitoring system into their TALIUS Smart Analytics platform. The device monitors resident's health send real-time data to their healthcare provid-

The importance of the presentation of your home when placing it on the market

by Zofia St James

THE year is moving fast and I'm wondering how many of you might be thinking of downsizing or possibly relocating to be nearer to family?

The real estate market is hot for sellers and properties are moving very fast – in fact, so fast that we can hardly keep up with the demand. However as much sought-after homes or specific neighbourhoods are, never underestimate the importance of preparation for selling ration for selling.

I'm talking about a serious declutter, which makes moving a dream when it is time to pack.

Dress your home in order that it can be photographed and marketed well, proudly for you the vendor but also by the Real Estate agency that will be taking it to market.

This also helps obtain as brilliant a price possible for the next chapter in your life.

Looking at a number of homes listed online the other day I was quite shocked at the photos of homes which were clearly in their rawest state.

I was surprised that owners were not have been given adequate information before the photography.

I personally can see past mess and visualise a property's potential, but the majority of buyers cannot.

Rooms need to be well lit and furniture positioned to showcase the room to their best advantage. Personal effects need to be hidden with just enough left around to suggest warmth and character.

If the house needs some TLC - a lick of paint and most importantly cleaned and gardens tidied - this needs to be done prior to photography and home opens.

These things show up in the photos and speak volumes on how the home has been maintained.

Ranges from Adairs and Empire in Osborne Park

The amount spent on a preparation should only be in proportion to the expected return. I like to be fairly conservative about this. I have seen some preparations carried out where the return on that investment was outstanding.

I am extremely proud to design, prescribe and execute property preparations knowing the team of trades we have on board are fantastic, reliable, well priced and quick, which is very important and often hard to find in this market space.

In my position as interior designer with the Sherlock Group, we have completed some quick flips and also managed some complete transformations with amazing results. We are finding that often we are getting more that the asking price for vendors which has been very exciting.

I have had great success with clients who want to do a bit of a makeover for their homes without spending a fortune.

Today I visited the Adairs Homemaker store in Osborne Park. They are a one-stop shop. In store now the new autumn/winter soft furnishings, furniture, linen, towels and homewares have been beautifully merchandised.

What I really like about this store is the layout and its location near other quality retail homeware stores along Scarborough Beach Road. This let you enjoy having a great look around and compare goods and prices.

As I have said many times, a makeover for your home is truly easy and affordable, as I always work to the budget my clients are prepared to spend.

I love to get that wow factor happening with some of the items available that are currently on trend. But I do choose with the idea that they should provide a timeless, classic feel, a polished look that will provide a breath of fresh air to any room that you think looks tired or drab.

Even though a seasonal palette is about what's in fashion now, it doesn't mean it's out the next season. Staying modern gives a home an instant facelift and I'm all for a facelift of any kind.

You are welcome to phone or email me with any questions. Take care everyone and enjoy beautiful April.

Discover the magic of Mankara at a community open day

Life sized kitchen built ready for Southcare's Mankara Community Open Day

HOMEBUYERS have an exclusive chance to taste the magic of Mankara at a Community Open Day on Saturday 1 May, as they gather around a lifesize replica kitchen which has been built to show what living at Mankara will be like.

As part of the open day, special launch prices are in place meaning homebuyers can secure a brand-new apartment for five per cent off the advertised market price, as another way to whet their appetites for the forthcoming Manning-based development.

The galley style kitchen measures just under four metres in length and has been built inside the development's new sales suite. It features engineered stone benchtops, overhead and under-bench cupboards and drawers, stainless steel integrated ducted rangehood, electric hotplate, feature tile splash back, double stainless-steel sink and appliances including a fridge, dishwasher and microwave.

Two types of hybrid wood-look flooring have also been installed for people to walk on, touch and test its non-slip rating as well as look at selection samples showing carpets, cupboard handles, tapware and laminates.

The development is powered by Southcare. CEO Dr Nicky Howe said building the replica kitchen was a tangible way to build trust before building the development.

Buying a home at any stage of life is a huge investment and because these strata apartments are forever homes for people aged 55 years or over, we want to provide them with absolute certainty that they are buying quality and are comfortable and confident in their decision," she said.

"That's why we have built a life size kitchen so people can come and relax with a cup of tea, just like they would if they lived there.

"A home is built for comfort and this is a good way to touch, feel and taste all the comforts of your future home before it is even built," she

Three types of interior schemes are available to personalise the apartments - called Freedom, Urban and Contempo each with different tones, warmth and aesthetics. The Freedom scheme is used in the replica kitch-

The Mankara development will see 82 strata titled apartments built over four levels plus a community centre and a public café. All apartments are architect designed in line with the stringent Liveable Housing Guidelines. Anyone can buy an apartment so long as a person living there is 55 years of age or older.

Construction is expected to start later this year with completion in 2022.

One bedroom apartments are selling now from $309,000 and multiple configurations are available with two and three bedroom and two bathroom designs.

The Open Day will happen from 10am-midday at 52 Bickley Crescent in Manning. Everyone is welcome to attend, and morning tea will be provided.

Lots of benefits to making the move

MOVING to a retirement estate like RAA-FA's Erskine Grove is particularly beneficial

when you have relocated from a different area and don't have a network of friends, says

Lots of benefits to making the move into a secure village Lyn Taylor who moved into the estate with her husband Peter in December 2019.

"We farmed for much of our married lives around Lake Grace and when we retired we moved down to Denmark, and then came up to Mandurah to be closer to our children," explains Lyn who will turn 77 this year.

"We bought a house around the corner from Erskine Grove initially, but then for several reasons thought it would be better to be in a more secure retirement estate, which is why we chose RAAFA.

"Initially, I wasn't too sure I was ready to make the move, but the people here are lovely, it's a really nice community and I have made many friends, in fact in no time at all you have an instant network of acquaintanc-

After leaving their farm, and then a larger house in Mandurah, Lyn said she wondered if she would struggle with a smaller home.

"I found the house was just lovely, it's heaps big enough for us and I absolutely love the kitchen," she adds. "Plus we are really happv to live in a secure village, and one that is very supportive.

This has been particularly important as Peter has Alzheimer's disease, so we have found the Mavericks group very helpful, and the wellbeing officer Angeline has been just wonderful. Actually, all of the office staff, as well as the grounds staff, are absolutely fantastic.

"I would say to anyone considering moving into a retirement home to come sooner rather than later, so that you have time to make friends, make the most of the facilities and stay active as you age.'

What happens to your Super when you die?

YOU may be surprised to learn that when you die, your superannuation funds don't automatically go to your estate or may not go to your preferred beneficiaries.

To ensure your superannuation funds go your preferred beneficiaries, you will need to complete your superannuation fund's nomination form. However, be aware that only certain beneficiaries will qualify as superannuation beneficiaries.

Nominations can be either binding or non-binding on the trustee of your fund. If you don't make a binding nomination, if the nomination is deemed invalid, or if the nomination lapses (usually after three years), the Trustee of your superannuation fund will then decide how your funds will be dealt with after you die.

If the trustee decides to pay your superannuation funds to your estate, and you don't have a will, your estate affairs are no longer simple. As a result, it will be necessary to engage a lawyer and your estate will incur higher legal fees. Hence, it is yet another reason why everyone should get advice about their estate planning.

Contact Emily Nixon or Shirley Tascone of Bespoke Wills and Estates to make your will or updated it.

Steven helps strive for a strong sense of community

Arcadia Waters Maddington Village manager, Steven Daly

ARCADIA Waters Maddington Village manager, Steven Daly knows just how important it is to hold onto that sense of community as you move though life. Having grown up in a Scottish village and now deeply rooted in Roleystone with a family of his own, Steven has long understood the importance bringing people and place together.

This passion was reinforced after the Wooroloo fires when Steven battled at the frontline as a volunteer firefighter.

"I originally signed up with Roleystone Volunteer Fire Brigade because I wanted to help the community. I had lived in Margaret River and went through the fires there in 2011, and obviously Roleystone is an extreme fire danger area. As part of a crew trying to save homes in the Perth Hills fires, seeing the devastation after the fire had gone through is indescribable."

Ten years on, the lessons from those sobering experiences inspire Steven to help make Arcadia Waters Maddington the tightknit, vibrant village it is today.

"I have worked with older people for over 15 years and enjoy engaging with people, especially our older Australians. For me, the recent fires have put into perspective what's important and taught me not to sweat the small stuff. Even though some people lost their homes, they still made time to look out for their neighbours.

"That sense of harmony is what we're striving to build at Arcadia Waters. A place where village residents pull together – a community within a community."

There are many ways in which Arcadia Waters Maddington fosters a sense of vibrant community. Surrounded by like-minded neighbours, residents at Arcadia Waters Maddington are strongly encouraged to live fulfilling, active and social lifestyles.

First class facilities at the $3.5m resort clubhouse include a state-of-the-art gym, spectacular indoor and outdoor pool and bowling green that residents can take advantage of to keep fit, healthy and independent. Masters of craft can choose to take advantage of the large craft room and equipped workshop to hone their skills and connect with others. In addition, an active social calendar comprising of card games, fitness classes and gatherings provide locals with the option to socialise and be as involved as they wish.

To learn more about how you can join the friendly community at Arcadia Waters Maddington, please contact Geraldine O'Shaughnessy at 0434 851 694 or email geraldine@arcadiagroup.com.au. Find out more at www.arcadiawaters.com.au

Helping people navigate the aged care journey

Graham Mabury

DID you know that Demystifying Aged Care is not just the name of Baptistcare's informative podcast hosted by radio legend Graham Mabury? It is actually a range of free support and information services which make understanding and accessing the right care options simple for both seniors and their family members.

From a practical written guide to understanding home care services, through to customer engagement consultants who are there to take on the 'heavy lifting' with paperwork and accessing funding, Demystifying Aged Care is focussed on helping people decide what matters to them in retirement and beyond.

The Demystifying Aged Care podcast which launched last year, shines a light on the aged care journey, through fascinating conversations with experts and seniors themselves.

Series two of the podcast sees Graham Mabury exploring a range of new topics including living in your own home with support, what it's like to work in aged care and the issues facing older Australians from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds.

New episodes will be available soon, but, in the meantime, if you haven't had a chance to listen to series one, search for Demystifying Aged Care on your favourite podcast app or visit baptistcare.com. au/podcast.

Members of the club enjoy the day in Rockingham

by Rose Hope

WE were on our way to Stirling Station when the bus in front chose to give up the ghost at the exit of the Karrinyup bus station, completely blocking our escape.

"Ok folks, looks like we're gunna 'ave to push.'

Unfortunately, idea didn't appeal to the motley crew aboard who were mostly pensioners. So there we were stuck until that rotten vehicle could be got out of the way. Which is why we missed the train on which we were to meet up with four other people.

At Stirling, we boarded the Mandurah line train which runs via Perth alighting at Rockingham station where we transferred to the shuttle bus which took us to magnificent Rockingham beach for a picnic on the foreshore with the COCOA (Come Out Camping Older Adults) Club.

What lay before us upon arrival was a view to die for. The colours of the bay resembled an artist's palette. Silver threaded its way through light blue in the shallow waters where people splashed joyfully about. Out into the distant deep blue sea, large ships sat waiting to come into port.

Near the shore, snowwhite seagulls bobbed up and down in the park, kids played on the brightly colourful play equipment beneath the canopy of shade created by ancient gum trees, their gnarled trunks weathered by old father time.

Families were seated beneath the many pergolas scattered around. The cafés and shops were busy and the coastal village of Rockingham was alive and pumping.

The COCOA mob commandeered one of the pergolas and extended the shaded area by adding a large canopy, courtesy of Margaret Kane, one of our long term members, a lovely lady, who had brought watermelon and a delicious cool lime cordial... with the gratitude of a person dying of thirst in the desert, I fell upon the mouth-watering refreshments.

A huge gathering of members sat in a circle talking, laughing, noisy as a flock of parrots. There were so many new faces. The COCOA mob grows constantly and it's great to have so many new members. It was a day to remember.

We are very fortunate in WA to have many beautiful places to visit which can be accessed by public transport. The COCOA Club have been to many of them and will be visiting many more.

The COCOA Club hold their getaways in spectacularly scenic undercover, places, they are fully catered for and affordable. If you would like to know more telephone Judy Hampson on 0450 735

Renewable green power discussed by retirees...

CLIMATE change is the major challenge facing the world and alternative, renewable and 'green' power sources are very much a part of future directions.

Australia is home to some of the largest tides in the world, but where are we at with developing this resource?

Brian Rourke, managing director of Tidal Energy Australia will be explaining the pros and cons of ocean power to members and visitors at the next meeting of the Association of Independent Retirees (Perth branch) on Friday 16 April from 10am to noon.

The following meting is on Friday 21 May, where Ms Jan Desmond's will talk is titled "From Family Home to Seniors' Accommodation and Care Options."

The aim of the association is to protect and advance the interests of retirees who wholly or partly fund their own retirement.

They meet on the third Friday of each month from 10am to noon at the Cambridge Bowling Club, Chandler Avenue West, Floreat.

Besides the meeting and morning tea they have a quest speaker, and over the year embrace many interesting topics related to finance, travel, health, community and special interests of members.

GREAT HOME and GARDENING

Garden shows galore and some advice on controlling pests in the garden for sale.

by Colin Barlow

OVER the last few months, roses throughout the Perth metropolitan area have been under serious attack. Damage includes silvery and bronzed, curled or wrinkled leaves, with more seriously burning or scaring of the foliage and new growth including the terminal stems, flower buds and calyx. These symptoms are caused by Chilli thrips. Severe infestation may cause defoliation, slow plant growth or even ultimately kill the plant.

Chilli thrips are native to South Asia but have expanded rapidly and become a worldwide pest of horticultural crops both edible and ornamental.

They inhabit protected areas of the plant including unopened flower and terminal buds, protecting themselves from exposure to the elements and insecticides. Detecting them is difficult due to their extremely small size, less than 2mm in length. Try tapping the terminal or top rose stems over a piece of white paper to dislodge the thrips, then use a hand lens to view

Control

Control of Chilli thrip is very difficult and the following methods should be tried.

· Remove damaged foliage and flowers including buds by pruning and place in a sealed plastic bag. Place in the sun for 24 hours to solarise the contents and place in the waste bin (not green waste)

 Apply a light dressing of controlled release fertiliser, seaweed solution and wetting agent around the roots and water in thorougrily

 Apply spray to the whole plant including the leaf undersides and buds. Effective insecticides include: spinetoram (Yates Success Ultra), Spinosad (Eco Naturalure), neem oil (Eco-Neem or AzaMax), imidacloprid (Bayer Confidor, Searles Conguard) or tau-fluvalinate (Yates Mavrik or Rose Shield). Repeat the spray in 10-14 days' time.

· Apply a systemic insecticide around the root system and water in thoroughly. An effective insecticide is imidacloprid (Richgro Bug Killa granules or Bayer Confidor tablets). These should last for six to eight weeks. Apply again in Spring before flowering when growth is soft and supple.

· Use yellow and blue sticky traps to trap adult thrips.

 Apply water over the foliage and flowers whenever possible. Keep your plants well-watered, as plants under water stress are more likely to succumb to attack.

 Pick up and remove any fallen leaves and place in a sealed bag in the bin.

 Try using a biological control agent like the pirate bug (Orius). These are available from Bugs for Bugs www.bugsforbugs. com.au

Autumn Garden Shows Perth Garden and Outdoor Living Festival is on from Thursday 29 April to Sunday 2 May at the new city location of Langley Park in Perth. The festival includes Perth's largest plant market with a range of specialist local nurseries and garden centres offering a superb selection of plants

There will also be the inspiring Stratco Show Gardens where landscape designers will try to create the ideal Perth backyard oasis, live music to sooth the ears and lots of activities to keep the kids occupied. There are also lots of activities to tempt your tastebuds, from craft beer and gin masterclasses, the Kleenheat Outdoor Kitchen or even a luxurious high tea amongst the flowers.

Gardens by Night open from Thursday to Saturday will allow you to enjoy the night-time ambience of the show, while overlooking Perth's wonderful riverside location. Visit the Richgro main stage for the latest tips from your local gardening experts. I will be talking about 'creating an indoor oasis' at 12.30pm on Sunday 2 May, and there will be a range of talks and seminars throughout the show.

Celebrating some of Western Australia's most influential women on canvas

A humorous, hopeful and courageous examination of what it means to take responsibility for your past and do something big for the future

by Carmen Jenner

PERMANENT Impressions – a collection of 50 portraits of some of Western Australia's most influential women celebrated its 10th anniversary this year.

In 2011, Perth-based artist Jana Vodesil-Baruffi set herself the task of painting 50 portraits in just one year, with the added challenge of completing each portrait within a 24-hour timeframe. The collection became known as Permanent Impressions and has been hailed as one of the largest portraiture collections by a single artist.

It was a process that was as satisfying as it was challenging. Completing a fast portrait requires much technical skill and great hand-eye coordination. The paintings were created with a palette knife, conserving the vibrancy of colour and her subjects' personalities.

"The project was a great artistic challenge and the excitement of that really appealed to me," says Jana. Funds raised from the project went to the Leukaemia Foundation, a charity very dear to Jana and her husband Kevin.

Accepting a challenge is something that Jana is no stranger to. In 1981 she started a new life in Perth after fleeing the stifling communist regime of the Czech Republic. Renowned for her artistic versatility, ranging from the realism of portraiture to landscapes, she also delves into the fantasy world of Fantastic Realism by combining her love of nature with the human form. Her extensive travels and international art tours have also resulted in visual diaries evoking a wanderlust for anyone with a yearning for travel.

With an impressively large body of work, Jana's awards are plentiful and after being a finalist in the Black Swan Prize numerous times, in 2017 she won the portraiture award for her moving and confronting portrait of a young woman with an eating disorder titled Black Swan. As a finalist in 2019 for the Darling Portrait Prize, her portrait of artist Matt Ottley was exhibited at National Portrait Gallery for nine months.

Permanent Impressions presented another challenge for Jana of having to decide who she would paint, as WA is blessed with so many remarkable women, but the WA Women's Hall of Fame was an ideal place to start.

Anti-drug advocate Jade Lewis is part of the collection and shares her experience.

"Sitting for my portrait was empowering and helped open up a lot of doors for Jade Lewis & Friends Inc."

The collection comprises of a cross section of women who have made a major contribution to our society in many vocations and community services, including Carmen Law-rence, Fiona Stanley, Kate Lamont and Ros Worthington.

"None of the ladies posed for me in a specific way, they just acted as themselves and I captured them in the moment giving the appearance they are engaging with the audience," says Jana.

A book soon followed, documenting the process and featuring profiles of each of the women. Titled Permanent Impressions: a salute to contemporary heroines and published by award-winning publisher Carina Hoang Communications (Carina is also part of the collection), the book won a bronze IPPY award in New York City in 2014 in the non-fiction category for Australia/New Zealand in the Independent Book Publishers Awards.

The paintings toured around regional Western Australia.

Jana recalls: "I visited so many places spanning from Port Hedland to Esperance. I'll never forget having a broken wheel in the middle of nowhere in 40° heat and unpacking 50 portraits and easels into the bush on the side of the road."

Admired by thousands and receiving widespread acclaim, it's not until you're actually standing among the portraits of these remarkable women that you can truly appreciate the scale and impact of Permanent Impressions.

A decade later the collection remains as a complete stand-alone collection and will be exhibited once again for the public from 24 to 26 April at Metamorphosis Art Gallery in Willetton.

Masterpiece musical West Side Story to play a limited season at Crown Perth

Opera Australia West Side Story © Jeff Busby

WHEN the original West Side Story opened on Broadway in 1957, musical theatre changed forever as the most complex and challenging unity of music, dance, book and lyrics was realised in a way which has been rarely matched since.

The genius of its four creators, a remarkable collaboration between Leonard Bernstein, Arthur Laurents, Stephen Sondheim and Jerome Robbins, produced a masterpiece whose artistic quality remains unquestioned to this day.

Now former pupil of Jerome Robbins, Joey McKneely's vibrant new stage production returns to Australia after wild world-wide. Since the first world tour in 2003, there have been more than 1500 performances of McKneely's award-winning production of West Side Story. Joey McKneely is a twotime Tony Award nominated choreographer whose Broadway credits include Smokey Joe's Café, The Life, Twelfth Night, The Wild Party and The Boy From Oz.

Opera Australia and GWB Entertainment have announced their rescheduled dates for the acclaimed BB Group production of West Side Story which will play at Crown Theatre from 29

June to 17 July.

Opera Australia's artistic director Lyndon Terracini said what a wonderful opportunity this will be for Perth audiences.

"West Side Story is one of the greatest pieces of musical theatre ever written, which is evidenced by sold out performances worldwide. Finally bringing the production back to Australia in 2021 to continue the success of the 2019 international tour was an opportunity that we just couldn't pass up," he said.

GWB Entertainment's Torben Brookman said: "Musicals like West Side Story only come along once in a lifetime. This piece transformed musical theatre around the world and is as relevant today as it was when first staged. It is a privilege to be working with BB Group, Opera Australia and QPAC to bring this production to Perth.

A modern retelling of Romeo and Juliet; this tragic love story tells the tale of two young people whose happiness is destroyed by the hate of two enemy camps in New York City's urban jungle. The 'Jets', sons of previous immigrants to America, battle the new arrivals from Puerto Rico, the 'Sharks', for domination of the streets.

adapted from the original TV series by Richard Curtis and Paul Mayhew-Archer.

This stage adaptation produced by Laughing Horse Productions takes its source primarily from the first two series of the show aired between 1994 and 1998. Series one consisted of six episodes and series two only four episodes, although some of the later episodes and specials have been referenced.

In this script adaption created by lan Gower, it is primarily about the reception a female vicar receives upon being assigned to a small farming village called Dibley. At first the village community are horrified at having received a female vicar from the church heirarchy, however eventually they learn to accept her as she learns (and challenges) the steadfast ways of the village. She manoeuvres her way into the hearts of the parishioners and the community in which she lives.

Don't miss this entertaining season of the much loved favourite and support local theatre.

The Vicar of Dibley plays at Koorliny Arts Centre on 14, 15, 21 and 22 May at 7.30pm with 2pm matinees on 15 and 22 May. Bookings www. koorliny.com.au/the-vicar-of-dibley/.

Perth's most loved three-in-one market returns this month and it's better than ever

COMING at you in April, the Treasured Craft Creations' 3 in 1 Market @ Showgrounds fair offers a range of unique creations from more than 300 local small businesses.

The event comprises three individual fairs which include handmade crafts, antiques and collectables and the Polka Dot Vintage Market, all conveniently located at the one venue. The craft exhibitors offer a wide variety of unique and quality handmade crafts for sale. Enjoy a shopping experience where the person selling the product is the person who made it. Craft stalls are situated inside the Robinson Pavilion. They also have a wide range of food products.

This fair includes antique and collectable dealers selling their wares at more than 100 stalls situated inside the Silver Jubilee Pavilion. Free antique valuations are also where customers can bring along a family heirloom. People with a passion for vintage and retro clothing and accessories available from 12pm to 3pm daily can browse in the 3 in 1 Market's Polka Dot Vintage Market.

Admission to the 3 in 1 Market is $8 with children up to 10 years old admit-

There will also be a chance to be in the draw to win the $2000 door prize.

The 3 in 1 Market @ Showgrounds is organised by Treasured Craft Creations. It will be held on Saturday 24 April from 9.30am to 4.30pm and Sunday 25 April 11am to 5pm at Claremont Showgrounds. This year things may be a little different with social distancing, but it will be an event not to be missed.

For further information about the fair, phone 9457 9315 or visit www. treasuredcraftcreations.com.au
